This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

MR. POPE, in his laſt illneſs, amuſed himſelf, amidſt the care of his higher concerns, in preparing a corrected and complete Edition of his Writings[a]; and, with his uſual delicacy, was even ſollicitous to prevent any ſhare of the offence they might occaſion, from falling on the Friend whom he had engaged to give them to the public[b].

[a]—"I own the late encroachments upon my conſtitution "made me willing to ſee the end of all further care about me "or my works. I would reſt for the one in a full reſigna- "tion of my Being to be diſpoſed of by the Father of all "mercy; and for the other (though indeed a trifle, yet a "trifle may be ſome example) I would commit them to the "candour of a ſenſible and reflecting judge, rather than to "the malice of every ſhort-ſighted and malevolent critic, or "inadvertent and cenſorious reader. And no hand can ſet "them in ſo good a light." &c. Let. CXX. to Mr. W.

[b]—"I alſo give and bequeath to the ſaid Mr. Warburton, "the property of all ſuch of my Works already printed as "he hath written or ſhall write Commentaries or Notes up- "on, and which I have not otherwiſe diſpoſed of or alienat- "ed; and as he ſhall publiſh WITHOUT FUTURE ALTE- "RATIONS."—His laſt Will and Teſtament.

In diſcharge of this truſt, the Public has here a complete Edition of his Works; executed in ſuch a manner, as, I am perſuaded, would have been to his ſatisfaction.

The Editor hath not, for the ſake of profit, ſuffered the Author's Name to be made cheap by a Subſcription; nor his Works to be defrauded of their due honours by a vulgar or inelegant Impreſſion; nor his Memory to be diſgraced by any pieces unworthy of his talents or virtue. On the contrary, he hath, at a very great expence, ornamented this Edition with all the advantages which the beſt Artiſts in Paper, Printing, and Sculpture could beſtow upon it.

If the Public hath waited longer than the deference due to it's generous impatience for the Author's writings ſhould have ſuffered, it was owing to a reaſon which the Editor need not be aſhamed to tell. It was his regard to the family-intereſts of his deceaſed Friend. Mr. Pope, at his death, had left large impreſſions of ſeveral parts of his Works, unſold; the property of which was adjudged to belong to his Executors; and the Editor was willing they ſhould

ſhould have time to diſpoſe of them to the beſt advantage, before the publication of this Edition (which hath been long prepared) ſhould put a ſtop to the ſale.

But it may be proper to be a little more particular concerning the ſuperiority of this Edition above all the preceding; ſo far as Mr. Pope himſelf was concerned. What the Editor hath done, the Reader muſt collect for himſelf.

The FIRST Volume, and the original poems in the SECOND, are here firſt printed from a copy corrected throughout by the Author himſelf, even to the very preface: Which, with ſeveral additional notes in his own hand, he delivered to the Editor a little before his death. The Juvenile tranſlations, in the other part of the SECOND Volume, it was never his intention to bring into this Edition of his Works, on account of the levity of ſome, the freedom of others, and the little importance of all. But theſe being the property of other men, the Editor had it not in his power to follow the Author's intention.

The THIRD Volume, (all but the Eſſay on Man, which together with the Eſſay on Criticiſm, the Author, a little before his death, had corrected and publiſhed in Quarto, as a ſpecimen of his projected Edition) was printed by him in his laſt illneſs, but never publiſhed, in the manner it is now given. The diſpoſition of the Epiſtle on the Characters of Men is quite altered: that on the Characters of Women much enlarged; and the Epiſtles on Riches and Taſte corrected and improved. To theſe advantages of the THIRD Volume, muſt be added a great number of fine verſes, taken from the Author's Manuſcript-copies of theſe poems, communicated by him for this purpoſe to the Editor. Theſe, the Author, when he firſt publiſhed the poems, to which they belong, thought proper, for various reaſons, to omit. Some, from the Manuſcript-copy of the Eſſay on Man, which tended to diſcredit fate, and to recommend the moral government of God, had, by the Editor's advice, been reſtored to their places in the laſt Edition of that Poem. The reſt, together with others of the like ſort, from his Manuſcript-copy of the other Ethic Epiſtles, are here inſerted at the bottom

The FOURTH Volume contains the Satires; with their Prologue, the Epiſtle to Dr. Arbuthnot; and Epilogue, the two poems intitled MDCCXXXVIII. The Prologue and Epilogue are here given with the like advantages as the Ethic Epiſtles in the foregoing Volume, that is to ſay, with the Variations, or additional verſes from the Author's Manuſcripts. The Epilogue to the Satires is likewiſe inriched with many and large notes, now firſt printed from the Author's own Manuſcript.

The FIFTH Volume contains a correcter and completer Edition of the Dunciad than hath been hitherto publiſhed; of which, at preſent, I have only this further to add, That it was at my requeſt he laid the plan of a fourth Book. I often told him, It was pity ſo fine a poem ſhould remain diſgraced by the meanneſs of its ſubject, the moſt inſignificant of all Dunces, bad Rhymers and malevolent Cavillers: That he ought to raiſe and enoble it by pointing his Satire againſt the moſt pernicious of all, Minute philoſophers and

Free-thinkers. I imagined, too, it was for the intereſts of Religion to have it known, that ſo great a Genius had a due abhorrence of theſe peſts of Virtue and Society. He came readily into my opinion; but at the ſame time, told me, it would create him many Enemies. He was not miſtaken. For tho' the terror of his pen kept them for ſome time in reſpect, yet on his death they roſe with unreſtrained fury in numerous Coffee-houſe tales, and Grub-ſtreet libels. The plan of this admirable Satire was artfully contrived to ſhew, that the follies and defects of a FASHIONABLE EDUCATION naturally led to, and neceſſarily ended in, FREE-THINKING; with deſign to point out the only remedy adequate to ſo deſtructive an evil. It was to advance the ſame ends of virtue and religion, that the Editor prevailed on him to alter every thing in his moral writings that might be ſuſpected of having the leaſt glance towards Fate or NATURALISM; and to add what was proper to convince the world that he was warmly on the ſide of MORAL GOVERNMENT and a revealed Will. And it would be great injuſtice tice to his memory not to declare that he embraced theſe occaſions with the moſt unfeigned pleaſure.

The SIXTH Volume conſiſts of Mr. Pope's miſcellaneous pieces in verſe and proſe. Amongſt the Verſe ſeveral fine poems make now their firſt appearance in his Works. And of the Proſe, all that is good, and nothing but what is exquiſitely ſo, will be found in this Edition.

The SEVENTH, EIGHTH, and NINTH Volumes conſiſt entirely of his Letters. The more valuable, as they are the only true models which we, or perhaps any of our neighbours, have of familiar Epiſtles. This collection is now made more complete by the addition of ſeveral new pieces. Yet, excepting a ſhort explanatory letter to Col. M. and the Letters to Mr. A. and Mr. W. (the latter of which are given to ſhew the Editor's inducements, and the engagements he was under, to intend the care of this Edition) excepting theſe, I ſay, the reſt are all here publiſhed from the Author's own printed, tho' not publiſhed, copies delivered to the Editor.

On the whole, the advantages of this Edition, above the preceding, are theſe, That it is the firſt complete collection which has ever been made of his original Writings. That all his principal poems, of early or later date, are here given to the public with his laſt corrections and improvements; That a great number of his verſes are here firſt printed from the Manuſcript-copies of his principal poems of later date; That many new notes of the Author are here added to his Poems; and laſtly, that ſeveral pieces, both in proſe and verſe, make now their firſt appearance before the Public.

The Author's Life deſerves a juſt volume; and the Editor intends to give it. For to have been one of the firſt Poets in the world is but his ſecond praiſe. He was in a higher Claſs. He was one of the nobleſt works of God. He was an honeſt Man[t]. A Man who alone poſſeſſed more real virtue than, in very corrupt times, needing a Satiriſt like him, will ſometimes fall to [t] " A wit's a feather, and a chief's a rod,

" An honeſt Man's the nobleſt work of God.

the ſhare of multitudes. In this hiſtory of his life, will be contained a large account of his writings; a critique on the nature, force, and extent of his genius, exemplified from theſe writings; and a vindication of his moral character, exemplified by his more diſtinguiſhed virtues; his filial piety, his diſintereſted friendſhips, his reverence for the conſtitution of his country, his love and admiration of VIRTUE, and, (what was the neceſſary effect) his hatred and contempt of VICE, his extenſive charity to the indigent, his warm benevolence to mankind, his ſupreme veneration of the Deity, and above all his ſincere belief of REVELATION. Nor ſhall his faults be concealed. It is not for the intereſts of his Virtues that they ſhould. Nor indeed could they be concealed, if we were ſo diſpoſed, for they ſhine thro' his Virtues; no man being more a Dupe to the ſpecious appearances of virtue in others. In a word, I mean not to be his Panegyriſt but his Hiſtorian. And may I, when Envy and Calumny have taken the ſame advantage of my abſence (for, while I live, I will freely truſt it to my my Life to confute them) may I find a Friend as careful of my honeſt fame as I have been of His!—Together with his Works, he hath bequeathed me his DUNCES. So that as the property is transferred, I could wiſh they would now let his memory alone. The veil which Death draws over the Good is ſo ſacred, that to tear it, and with ſacrilegious hands, to throw dirt upon the Shrine, gives ſcandal even to Barbarians. And tho' Rome permitted her ſlaves to calumniate her beſt Citizens on the day of Triumph, yet the ſame petulancy at their Funeral would have been rewarded with execration and a Gibbet. The Public may be malicious: but is rarely vindictive or ungenerous. It would abhor all inſults, on a writer dead, tho' it had borne with the ribaldry, or even ſet the Ribalds on work, when he was alive. And in this there is no great harm: for he muſt have a ſtrange impotency of mind indeed whom ſuch miſerable ſcriblers can diſturb or ruffle. Of all that groſs Beotian phalanx who have written ſcurrilouſly againſt the Editor, he knows not ſo much as One whom a writer of reputation would not wiſh to have his enemy, or whom a man of honour would not be aſhamed to own for his friend. He is indeed but ſlightly converſant in their works, and knows little of the particulars of their defamation. To his Authorſhip they are heartily welcome. But if any of them have been ſo far abandoned by Truth as to attack his moral character in any reſpect whatſoever, to all and every one of Theſe and their Abettors, he gives the LYE in form, and in the words of honeſt Father Valerian, MENTIRIS IMPUDENTISSIME.

PREFACE.

I Am inclined to think that both the writers of books, and the readers of them, are generally not a little unreaſonable in their expectations. The firſt ſeem to fancy the world muſt approve whatever they produce, and the latter to imagine that authors are obliged to pleaſe them at any rate. Methinks, as on the one hand no ſingle man is born with a right of controuling the opinions of all the reſt; ſo on the other, the world has no title to demand, that the whole care and time of any particular perſon ſhould be ſacrificed to its entertainment. Therefore I cannot but believe that writers and readers are under equal obligations, for as much fame, or pleaſure, as each affords the other.

Every one acknowledges, it would be a wild notion to expect perfection in any work of man: and yet one would think the contrary was taken for granted, by the judgment commonly paſt upon Poems. A Critic ſuppoſes he has done his part, if he proves a writer to have failed in an expreſſion, or erred in any particular point: and can it then be wondered at, if the Poets in general ſeem reſolved not to own themſelves in any error? For as long as one ſide will make no allowances, the other will be brought to no acknowledgments *.

I am afraid this extreme zeal on both ſides is ill-placed; Poetry and Criticiſm being by no means the univerſal concern of the world, but only the affair of idle men who write in their cloſets, and of idle men who read there.

Yet ſure, upon the whole, a bad Author deſerves better uſage than a bad Critic: for a Writer's endeavour, for the moſt part, is to pleaſe his Readers, and he fails merely through the misfortune of an ill judgment; but ſuch a Critic's is to put them out of humour; a deſign he could never go upon without both that and an ill temper.

I think a good deal may be ſaid to extenuate the fault of bad Poets. What we call a Genius, is hard to be diſtinguiſhed by a man himſelf, from a ſtrong inclination: and if his genius be ever ſo great, he cannot at firſt diſcover it any other way, than by giving way to that prevalent propenſity which renders him the more liable to be miſtaken. The only method he has, is to make the experiment by writing, and appealing to the judgment of others: now if he happens to write ill (which is certainly no ſin in itſelf) he is immediately made an object of ridicule. I wiſh we had the humanity to reflect that even the worſt authors might, in their endeavour to pleaſe us, deſerve ſomething at our hands. We have no cauſe to quarrel with them but for their obſtinacy in perſiſting to write; and this too may admit of alleviating circumſtances. Their particular friends may be either ignorant, or inſincere; and the reſt of the world in general is too well-bred to ſhock them with a truth, which generally their Bookſellers are the firſt that inform them of. This happens not till they have ſpent too much of their time to apply to any profeſſion which might better fit their talents; and till ſuch talents as they have are ſo far diſcredited as to be but of ſmall ſervice to them. For (what is the hardeſt caſe imaginable) the reputation of a man generally depends upon the firſt ſteps he makes in the world; and people will eſtabliſh their opinion of us, from what we do at that ſeaſon when we have leaſt judgment to direct us.

* In the former editions it was thus—For as long as one ſide deſpiſes a well-meant endeavour, the other will not be ſatisfied with a moderate approbation.—But the Author altered it, as theſe words were rather a conſequence from the concluſion he would draw, than the concluſion itſelf, which he has now inſerted.

On the other hand, a good Poet no ſooner communicates his works with the ſame deſire of information, but it is imagined he is a vain young creature given up to the ambition of fame; when perhaps the poor man is all the while trembling with the fear of being ridiculous. If he is made to hope he may pleaſe the world, he falls under very unlucky circumſtances: for, from the moment he prints, he muſt expect to hear no more truth, than if he were a Prince, or a Beauty. If he has not very good ſenſe (and indeed there are twenty men of wit, for one man of ſenſe) his living thus in a courſe of flattery may put him in no ſmall danger of becoming a Coxcomb: if he has, he will conſequently have ſo much diffidence as not to reap any great ſatisfaction from his praiſe; ſince, if it be given to his face, it can ſcarce be diſtinguiſhed from flattery, and if in his abſence, it is hard to be certain of it. Were he ſure to be commended by the beſt and moſt knowing, he is as ſure of being envied by the worſt and moſt ignorant, which are the majority; for it is with a fine Genius as with a fine faſhion, all thoſe are diſpleaſed at it who are not able to follow it: and it is to be feared that eſteem will ſeldom do any man ſo much good, as ill-will does him harm. Then there is a third claſs of people, who make the largeſt part of mankind, thoſe of ordinary or indifferent capacities; and theſe (to a man) will hate, or ſuſpect him: a hundred honeſt Gentlemen will dread him as a Wit, and a hundred innocent women as a Satiriſt. In a word, whatever be his fate in Poetry, it is ten to one but he muſt give up all the reaſonable aims of life for it. There are indeed ſome advantages accruing from a Genius to Poetry, and they are all I can think of: the agreeable power of ſelf-amuſement when a man is idle or alone; the privilege of being admitted into the beſt company; and the freedom of ſaying as many careleſs things as other people, without being ſo ſeverely remarked upon.

I believe, if any one, early in his life, ſhould contemplate the dangerous fate of authors, he would ſcarce be of their number on any conſideration. The life of a Wit is a warfare upon earth; and the preſent ſpirit of the learned world is ſuch, that to attempt to ſerve it (any way) one muſt have the conſtancy of a martyr, and a reſolution to ſuffer for its ſake. I could wiſh people would believe, what I am pretty certain they will not, that I have been much leſs concerned about Fame than I durſt declare till this occaſion, when methinks I ſhould find more credit than I could heretofore: ſince my writings have had their fate already, and it is too late to think of prepoſſeſſing the reader in their favour. I would plead it as ſome merit in me, that the world has never been prepared for theſe Trifles by Prefaces, byaſſed by recommendation, dazled with the names of great Patrons, wheedled with fine reaſons and pretences, or troubled with excuſes. I confeſs it was want of conſideration that made me an author; I writ becauſe it amuſed me; I corrected becauſe it was as pleaſant to me to correct as to write; and I publiſhed becauſe I was told, I might pleaſe ſuch as it was a credit to pleaſe. To what degree I have done this, I am really ignorant; I had too much fondneſs for my productions to judge of them at firſt, and too much judgment to be pleaſed with them at laſt. But I have Reaſon to think they can have no reputation which will continue long, or which deſerves to do ſo: for they have always fallen ſhort not only of what I read of others, but even of my own Ideas of Poetry.

If any one ſhould imagine I am not in earneſt, I deſire him to reflect, that the Ancients (to ſay the leaſt of them) had as much Genius as we: and that to take more pains, and employ more time, cannot fail to produce more compleat pieces. They conſtantly apply'd themſelves not only to that art, but to that ſingle branch of an art, to which their talent was moſt powerfully bent; and it was the buſineſs of their lives to correct and finiſh their works for poſterity. If we can pretend to have uſed the ſame induſtry, let us expect the ſame immortality: Tho' if we took the ſame care, we ſhould ſtill lie under a farther misfortune: they writ in languages that became univerſal and everlaſting, while ours are extremely limited both in extent and in duration. A mighty foundation for our pride! when the utmoſt we can hope, is but to be read in one Iſland, and to be thrown aſide at the end of one Age.

All that is left us is to recommend our productions by the imitation of the Ancients: and it will be found true, that in every age, the higheſt character for ſenſe and learning has been obtained by thoſe who have been moſt indebted to them. For, to ſay truth, whatever is very good ſenſe, muſt have been common ſenſe in all times; and what we call Learning, is but the knowledge of the ſenſe of our predeceſſors. Therefore they who ſay our thoughts are not our own, becauſe they reſemble the Ancients, may as well ſay our faces are not our own, becauſe they are like our Fathers: And indeed it is very unreaſonable, that people ſhould expect us to be Scholars, and yet be angry to find us ſo.

I fairly confeſs that I have ſerved myſelf all I could by reading; that I made uſe of the judgment of authors dead and living; that I omitted no means in my power to be informed of my errors, both by my friends and enemies: But the true Reaſon theſe pieces are not more correct, is owing to the conſideration how ſhort a time they, and I, have to live: One may be aſhamed to conſume half one's days in bringing ſenſe and rhyme together; and what Critic can be ſo unreaſonable, as not to leave a man time enough for any more ſerious employment, or more agreeable amuſement?

The only plea I ſhall uſe for the favour of the public, is, that I have as great a reſpect for it, as moſt authors have for themſelves; and that I have ſacrificed much of my own ſelf-love for its ſake, in preventing not only many mean things from ſeeing the light, but many which I thought tolerable. I would not be like thoſe Authors, who forgive themſelves ſome particular lines for the ſake of a whole Poem, and vice verſa a whole Poem for the ſake of ſome particular lines. I believe no one qualification is ſo likely to make a good writer, as the power of rejecting his own thoughts; and it muſt be this (if any thing) that can give me a chance to be one. For what I have publiſhed, I can only hope to be pardoned; but for what I have burn'd, I deſerve to be prais'd. On this account the world is under ſome obligation to me, and owes me the juſtice in return, to look upon no verſes as mine that are not inſerted in this collection. And perhaps nothing could make it worth my while to own what are really ſo, but to avoid the imputation of ſo many dull and immoral things, as partly by malice, and partly by ignorance, have been aſcribed to me. I muſt further acquit myſelf of the preſumption of having lent my name to recommend any Miſcellanies, or Works of other men; a thing I never thought becoming a Perſon who has hardly credit enough to anſwer for his own.

In this office of collecting my pieces, I am altogether uncertain, whether to look upon myſelf as a man building a monument, or burying the dead.

If Time ſhall make it the former, may theſe Poems (as long as they laſt) remain as a teſtimony, that their Author never made his talents ſubſervient to the mean and unworthy ends of Party or Self-intereſt; the gratification of public prejudices, or private paſſions; the flattery of the undeſerving, or the inſult of the unfortunate. If I have written well, let it be conſidered that 'tis what no man can do without good ſenſe, a quality that not only renders one capable of being a good writer, but a good man. And if I have made any acquiſition in the opinion of any one under the notion of the former, let it be continued to me under no other title than that of the latter.

But if this publication be only a more ſolemn funeral of my remains, I deſire it may be known that I die in charity, and in my ſenſes; without any murmurs againſt the juſtice of this age, or any mad appeals to poſterity. I declare I ſhall think the world in the right, and quietly ſubmit to every truth which time ſhall diſcover to the prejudice of theſe writings; not ſo much as wiſhing ſo irrational a thing, as that every body ſhould be deceived merely for my credit. However, I deſire it may then be conſidered, That there are very few things in this collection which were not written under the age of five and twenty: ſo that my youth may be made (as it never fails to be in Executions) a caſe of compaſſion. That I was never ſo concerned about my works as to vindicate them in print, believing, if any thing was good, it would defend itſelf, and what was bad could never be defended. That I uſed no artifice to raiſe or continue a reputation, depreciated no dead author I was obliged to, bribed no living one with unjuſt praiſe, inſulted no adverſary with ill language; or, when I could not attack a Rival's works, encouraged reports againſt his Morals. To conclude, if this volume periſh, let it ſerve as a warning to the Critics, not to take too much pains for the future to deſtroy ſuch things as will die of themſelves; and a Memento mori to ſome of my vain contemporaries the Poets, to teach them that, when real merit is wanting, it avails nothing to have been encouraged by the great, commended by the eminent, and favoured by the public in general.

Variations in the Author's Manuſcript Preface.

AFTER pag. xvii. l. 4. it followed thus—For my part, I confeſs, had I ſeen things in this view at firſt, the public had never been troubled either with my writings, or with this apology for them. I am ſenſible how difficult it is to ſpeak of ones ſelf with decency: but when a man muſt ſpeak of himſelf, the beſt way is to ſpeak truth of himſelf, or, he may depend upon it, others will do it for him. I'll therefore make this Preface a general confeſſion of all my thoughts of my own Poetry, reſolving with the ſame freedom to expoſe myſelf, as it is in the power of any other to expoſe them. In the firſt place, I thank God and nature, that I was born with a love to poetry; for nothing more conduces to fill up all the intervals of our time, or if rightly uſed, to make the whole courſe of life entertaining: Cantantes licet uſque (minus via lædet.) 'Tis a vaſt happineſs to poſſeſs the pleaſures of the head, the only pleaſures in which a man is ſufficient to himſelf, and the only part of him which, to his ſatisfaction, he can employ all day long. The Muſes are amicæ omnium horarum; and, like our gay acquaintance, the beſt company in the world as long as one expects no real ſervice from them. I confeſs there was a time when I was in love with myſelf, and my firſt productions were the children of ſelf love upon innocence. I had made an Epic Poem, and Panegyrics on all the Princes in Europe, and thought myſelf the greateſt genius that ever was. I can't but regret thoſe delightful viſions of my childhood, which, like the fine colours we ſee when our eyes are ſhut, are vaniſhed for ever. Many tryals and ſad experience have ſo undeceived me by degrees, that I am utterly at a loſs at what rate to value myſelf. As for fame I ſhall be glad of any I can get, and not repine at any I miſs; and as for vanity, I have enough to keep me from hanging myſelf, or even from wiſhing thoſe hanged who would take it away. It was this that made me write. The ſenſe of my faults made me correct: beſides that it was as pleaſant to me to correct as to write.

At p. xix. l. 12.—In the firſt place I own that I have uſed my beſt endeavours to the finiſhing theſe pieces. That I made what advantage I could of the judgment of authors dead and living; and that I omitted no means in my power to be informed of my errors by my friends and my enemies: And that I expect no favour on account of my youth, buſineſs, want of health, or any ſuch idle excuſes. But the true reaſon they are not yet more correct is owing to the conſideration how ſhort a time they, and I, have to live. A man that can expect but ſixty years may be aſhamed to employ thirty in meaſuring ſyllables and bringing ſenſe and rhyme together. We ſpend our youth in purſuit of riches or fame, in hopes to enjoy them when we are old, and when we are old, we find it is too late to enjoy any thing. I therefore hope the Wits will pardon me, if I reſerve ſome of my time to ſave my ſoul; and that ſome wiſe men will be of my opinion, even if I ſhould think a part of it better ſpent in the enjoyments of life than in pleaſing the critics.

On Mr. POPE and his Poems,

By His GRACE

JOHN SHEFFIELD,

Duke of BUCKINGHAM.

WITH Age decay'd, with Courts and bus'neſs tir'd,
Caring for nothing but what Eaſe requir'd;
Too dully ſerious for the Muſe's ſport,
And from the Critics ſafe arriv'd in Port;
I little thought of launching forth agen,
Amidſt advent'rous Rovers of the Pen:
And after ſo much undeſerv'd ſucceſs,
Thus hazarding at laſt to make it leſs.
Encomiums ſuit not this cenſorious time,
Itſelf a Subject for ſatyric rhyme;
Ignorance honour'd, Wit and Worth defam'd,
Folly triumphant, and ev'n Homer blam'd!
But to this Genius, join'd with ſo much Art,
Such various Learning mix'd in ev'ry part,

Poets are bound a loud applauſe to pay;
Apollo bids it, and they muſt obey.
And yet ſo wonderful, ſublime a thing,
As the great ILIAD, ſcarce could make me ſing;
Except I juſtly could at once commend
A good Companion, and as firm a Friend.
One moral, or a mere well-natur'd deed
Can all deſert in Sciences exceed.
'Tis great delight to laugh at ſome mens ways,
But a much greater to give Merit praiſe.

To Mr. POPE on his Paſtorals.

IN theſe more dull, as more cenſorious days,
When few dare give, and fewer merit praiſe,
A Muſe ſincere, that never Flatt'ry knew,
Pays what to friendſhip and deſert is due.
Young, yet judicious; in your verſe are found
Art ſtrength'ning Nature, Senſe improv'd by Sound.
Unlike thoſe Wits, whoſe numbers glide along
So ſmooth, no thought e'er interrupts the ſong:
Laboriouſly enervate they appear,
And write not to the head, but to the ear:

Our minds unmov'd and unconcern'd they lull,
And are at beſt moſt muſically dull:
So purling ſtreams with even murmurs creep,
And huſh the heavy hearers into ſleep.
As ſmootheſt ſpeech is moſt deceitful found,
The ſmootheſt numbers oft are empty ſound.
But Wit and Judgment join at once in you,
Sprightly as Youth, as Age conſummate too:
Your ſtrains are regularly bold, and pleaſe
With unforc'd care, and unaffected eaſe,
With proper thoughts, and lively images:
Such as by Nature to the Antients ſhewn,
Fancy improves, and judgment makes your own:
For great mens faſhions to be follow'd are,
Altho' diſgraceful 'tis their clothes to wear.
Some in a poliſh'd ſtyle write Paſtoral,
Arcadia ſpeaks the language of the Mall;
Like ſome fair Shepherdeſs, the Sylvan Muſe,
Should wear thoſe flow'rs her native fields produce;
And the true meaſure of the Shepherd's wit
Should, like his garb, be for the Country fit:
Yet muſt his pure and unaffected thought
More nicely than the common ſwains be wrought.
So, with becoming art, the Players dreſs
In ſilks the ſhepherd, and the ſhepherdeſs;

Yet ſtill unchang'd the form and mode remain,
Shap'd like the homely ruſſet of the ſwain.
Your rural Muſe appears to juſtify
The long loſt graces of Simplicity:
So rural beauties captivate our ſenſe
With virgin charms, and native excellence.
Yet long her Modeſty thoſe charms conceal'd,
'Till by mens Envy to the world reveal'd;
For Wits induſtrious to their trouble ſeem,
And needs will envy what they muſt eſteem.

Live and enjoy their ſpite! nor mourn that fate,
Which would, if Virgil liv'd, on Virgil wait;
Whoſe Muſe did once, like thine, in plains delight;
Thine ſhall, like his, ſoon take a higher flight;
So Larks, which firſt from lowly fields ariſe,
Mount by degrees, and reach at laſt the ſkies.

W. WYCHERLEY.

To Mr. POPE, on his Windſor-Foreſt.

HAIL, ſacred Bard! a Muſe unknown before
Salutes thee from the bleak Atlantic ſhore.
To our dark world thy ſhining page is ſhown,
And Windſor's gay retreat becomes our own.

The Eaſtern pomp had juſt beſpoke our care,
And India pour'd her gaudy treaſures here:
A various ſpoil adorn'd our naked land,
The pride of Perſia glitter'd on our ſtrand,
And China's Earth was caſt on common ſand:
Toſs'd up and down the gloſſy fragments lay,
And dreſſed the rocky ſhelves, and pav'd the painted bay.
Thy treaſures next arriv'd: and now we boaſt
A nobler cargo on our barren coaſt:
From thy luxuriant Foreſt we receive
More laſting glories than the Eaſt can give.
Where-e'er we dip in thy delightful page,
What pompous ſcenes our buſy thoughts engage!
The pompous ſcenes in all their pride appear,
Freſh in the page, as in the grove they were.
Nor half ſo true the fair Lodona ſhows
The ſylvan ſtate that on her border grows,
While ſhe the wond'ring ſhepherd entertains
With a new Windſor in her wat'ry plains;
Thy juſter lays the lucid wave ſurpaſs,
The living ſcene is in the Muſe's glaſs.
Nor ſweeter notes the echoing foreſts cheer,
When Philomela ſits and warbles there,

Than when you ſing the greens and op'ning glades,
And give us Harmony as well as Shades:
A Titian's hand might draw the grove, but you
Can paint the grove, and add the Muſic too.
With vaſt variety thy pages ſhine;
A new creation ſtarts in ev'ry line.
How ſudden trees riſe to the reader's ſight,
And make a doubtful ſcene of ſhade and light,
And give at once the day, at once the night!
And here again what ſweet confuſion reigns,
In dreary deſerts mix'd with painted plains!
And ſee! the deſerts caſt a pleaſing gloom,
And ſhrubby heaths rejoice in purple bloom:
Whilſt fruitful crops riſe by their barren ſide,
And bearded groves diſplay their annual pride.
Happy the man, who ſtrings his tuneful lyre,
Where woods, and brooks, and breathing fields inſpire!
Thrice happy you! and worthy beſt to dwell
Amidſt the rural joys you ſing ſo well.
I in a cold, and in a barren clime,
Cold as my thought, and barren as my rhyme,
Here on the Weſtern beach attempt to chime.

O joyleſs flood! O rough tempeſtuous main!
Border'd with weeds, and ſolitudes obſcene!
Snatch me, ye Gods! from theſe Atlantic ſhores,
And ſhelter me in Windſor's fragrant bow'rs;
Or to my much-lov'd Iſis' walks convey,
And on her flow'ry banks for ever lay.
Thence let me view the venerable ſcene,
The awful dome, the groves eternal green:
Where ſacred Hough long found his fam'd retreat,
And brought the Muſes to the ſylvan ſeat,
Reform'd the wits, unlock'd the Claſſic ſtore,
And made that Muſic which was noiſe before.
There with illuſtrious Bards I ſpent my days,
Nor free from cenſure, nor unknown to praiſe,
Enjoy'd the bleſſings that his reign beſtow'd,
Nor envy'd Windſor in the ſoft abode.
The golden minutes ſmoothly danc'd away,
And tuneful Bards beguil'd the tedious day:
They ſung, nor ſung in vain, with numbers fir'd
That Maro taught, or Addiſon inſpir'd.
Ev'n I eſſay'd to touch the trembling ſtring:
Who could hear them, and not attempt to ſing?
Rouz'd from theſe dreams by thy commanding ſtrain,
I riſe and wander through the field or plain;

Led by thy Muſe from ſport to ſport I run,
Mark the ſtretch'd Line, or hear the thund'ring gun.
Ah! how I melt with pity, when I ſpy
On the cold earth the flutt'ring Pheaſant lie;
His gaudy robes in dazzling lines appear,
And ev'ry feather ſhines and varies there.
Nor can I paſs the generous courſer by,
But while the prancing ſteed allures my eye,
He ſtarts, he's gone! and now I ſee him fly
O'er hills and dales, and now I loſe the courſe,
Nor can the rapid ſight purſue the flying horſe.
Oh could thy Virgil from his orb look down,
He'd view a courſer that might match his own!
Fir'd with the ſport, and eager for the chace,
Lodona's murmurs ſtop me in the race.
Who can refuſe Lodona's melting tale?
The ſoft complaint ſhall over time prevail;
The Tale be told, when ſhades forſake her ſhore,
The Nymph be ſung, when ſhe can flow no more.
Nor ſhall thy ſong, old Thames! forbear to ſhine,
At once the ſubject and the ſong divine.
Peace, ſung by thee, ſhall pleaſe ev'n Britons more
Than all their ſhouts for Victory before.
Oh! could Britannia imitate thy ſtream,
The World ſhould tremble at her awful name:

From various ſprings divided waters glide,
In diff'rent colours roll a diff'rent tide,
Murmur along their crooked banks a while,
At once they murmur and enrich the Iſle;
A while diſtinct thro' many channels run,
But meet at laſt, and ſweetly flow in one;
There joy to loſe their long-diſtinguiſh'd names,
And make one glorious, and immortal Thames.

FR. KNAPP.

To Mr. POPE.

In Imitation of a Greek Epigram on HOMER.

WHEN Phœbus, and the nine harmonious maids,
Of old aſſembled in the Theſpian ſhades;
What theme, they cry'd, what high immortal air,
Befit theſe harps to ſound, and thee to hear?
Reply'd the God; "Your loftieſt notes employ,
"To ſing young Peleus, and the fall of Troy."
The wond'rous ſong with rapture they rehearſe;
Then aſk who wrought that miracle of verſe?
He anſwer'd with a frown; "I now reveal
"A truth, that envy bids me not conceal:

" Retiring frequent to this Laureat vale,
" I warbled to the Lyre that fav'rite tale,
" Which, unobſerv'd, a wand'ring Greek and blind,
" Heard me repeat, and treaſur'd in his mind;
" And fir'd with thirſt of more than mortal praiſe,
" From me, the God of Wit, uſurp'd the bays.
" But let vain Greece indulge her growing fame,
" Proud with celeſtial ſpoils to grace her name;
" Yet when my Arts ſhall triumph in the Weſt,
" And the white Iſle with female pow'r is bleſt;
" Fame, I foreſee, will make repriſals there,
" And the Tranſlator's Palm to me transfer.
" With leſs regret my claim I now decline,
" The World will think his Engliſh Iliad mine."

E. FENTON.

To Mr. POPE.

TO praiſe, and ſtill with juſt reſpect to praiſe
A Bard triumphant in immortal bays,
The Learn'd to ſhow, the Senſible commend,
Yet ſtill preſerve the province of the Friend;
What life, what vigour muſt the lines require?
What Muſic tune them, what Affection fire?

O might thy Genius in my boſom ſhine;
Thou ſhould'ſt not fail of numbers worthy thine;
The brighteſt Ancients might at once agree
To ſing within my lays, and ſing of thee.

Horace himſelf would own thou doſt excell
In candid arts to play the Critic well.
Ovid himſelf might wiſh to ſing the Dame
Whom Windſor Foreſt ſees a gliding ſtream:
On ſilver feet, with annual Oſier crown'd,
She runs for ever thro' Poetic ground.

How flame the glories of Belinda's Hair,
Made by thy Muſe the envy of the Fair?
Leſs ſhone the treſſes Ægypt's princeſs wore,
Which ſweet Callimachus ſo ſung before.
Here courtly trifles ſet the world at odds;
Belles war with Beaux, and Whims deſcend for Gods.
The new Machines, in names of ridicule,
Mock the grave phrenzy of the Chemic fool.
But know, ye Fair, a point conceal'd with art,
The Sylphs and Gnomes are but a Woman's heart.
The graces ſtand in ſight; a Satire-train
Peeps o'er their head, and laughs behind the ſcene.

In Fame's fair Temple, o'er the boldeſt wits
Inſhrin'd on high the ſacred Virgil ſits;

And ſits in meaſures ſuch as Virgil's Muſe
To place thee near him might be fond to chuſe.
How might he tune th' alternate reed with thee,
Perhaps a Strephon thou, a Daphnis he;
While ſome old Damon, o'er the vulgar wiſe,
Thinks he deſerves, and thou deſerv'ſt the Prize?
Rapt with the thought, my fancy ſeeks the plains,
And turns me ſhepherd while I hear the ſtrains.
Indulgent nurſe of ev'ry tender gale,
Parent of flowrets, old Arcadia, hail!
Here in the cool my limbs at eaſe I ſpread,
Here let thy poplars whiſper o'er my head:
Still ſlide thy waters, ſoft among the trees,
Thy aſpins quiver in a breathing breeze!
Smile, all ye valleys, in eternal ſpring,
Be huſh'd, ye winds, while Pope and Virgil ſing.
In Engliſh lays, and all ſublimely great,
Thy Homer warms with all his ancient heat;
He ſhines in Council, thunders in the Fight,
And flames with ev'ry ſenſe of great delight.
Long has that Poet reign'd, and long unknown,
Like Monarchs ſparkling on a diſtant throne;
In all the Majeſty of Greek retir'd,
Himſelf unknown, his mighty name admir'd;

His language failing, wrapt him round with night;
Thine, rais'd by thee, recalls the work to light.
So wealthy Mines, that ages long before
Fed the large realms around with golden Ore,
When choak'd by ſinking banks, no more appear,
And ſhepherds only ſay, The mines were here:
Should ſome rich youth (if nature warm his heart,
And all his projects ſtand inform'd with art)
Here clear the caves, there ope the leading vein;
The mines detected flame with gold again.

How vaſt, how copious, are thy new deſigns!
How ev'ry Muſic varies in thy lines!
Still, as I read, I feel my boſom beat,
And riſe in raptures by another's heat.
Thus in the wood, when ſummer dreſs'd the days,
While Windſor lent us tuneful hours of eaſe,
Our ears the lark, the thruſh, the turtle bleſt,
And Philomela ſweeteſt o'er the reſt:
The ſhades reſound with ſong---O ſoftly tread,
While a whole ſeaſon warbles round my head.

This to my Friend—and when a friend inſpires,
My ſilent harp its maſter's hand requires;
Shakes off the duſt, and makes theſe rocks reſound;
For fortune plac'd me in unfertile ground;

Far from the joys that with my ſoul agree,
From wit, from learning---very far from thee.
Here moſs-grown trees expand the ſmalleſt leaf;
Here half an acre's corn is half a ſheaf;
Here hills with naked heads the tempeſt meet,
Rocks at their ſides, and torrents at their feet;
Or lazy lakes unconſcious of a flood,
Whoſe dull brown Naiads ever ſleep in mud.
Yet here Content can dwell, and learned Eaſe,
A Friend delight me, and an Author pleaſe;
Ev'n here I ſing, when POPE ſupplies the theme,
Shew my own love, tho' not increaſe his fame.

T. PARNELL.

To Mr. POPE.

LET vulgar ſouls triumphal arches raiſe,
Or ſpeaking marbles, to record their praiſe;
And picture (to the voice of Fame unknown)
The mimic Feature on the breathing ſtone;
Mere mortals; ſubject to death's total ſway,
Reptiles of earth, and beings of a day!
'Tis thine, on ev'ry heart to grave thy praiſe,
A monument which Worth alone can raiſe:

Sure to ſurvive, when time ſhall whelm in duſt
The arch, the marble, and the mimic buſt:
Nor 'till the volumes of th' expanded ſky
Blaze in one flame, ſhalt thou and Homer die:
Then ſink together in the world's laſt fires,
What heav'n created, and what heav'n inſpires.
If aught on earth, when once this breath is fled,
With human tranſport touch the mighty dead,
Shakeſpear, rejoice! his hand thy page refines;
Now ev'ry ſcene with native brightneſs ſhines;
Juſt to thy fame, he gives thy genuine thought;
So Tully publiſh'd what Lucretius wrote;
Prun'd by his care, thy laurels loftier grow,
And bloom afreſh on thy immortal brow.
Thus when thy draughts, O Raphael! time invades,
And the bold figure from the canvaſs fades,
A rival hand recalls from every part
Some latent grace, and equals art with art;
Tranſported we ſurvey the dubious ſtrife,
While each fair image ſtarts again to life.
How long, untun'd, had Homer's ſacred lyre
Jarr'd grating diſcord, all extinct his fire?

This you beheld; and taught by heav'n to ſing,
Call'd the loud muſic from the ſounding ſtring.
Now wak'd from ſlumbers of three thouſand years,
Once more Achilles in dread pomp appears,
Tow'rs o'er the field of death; as fierce he turns,
Keen flaſh his arms, and all the Hero burns;
With martial ſtalk, and more than mortal might,
He ſtrides along, and meets the Gods in fight:
Then the pale Titans, chain'd on burning floors,
Start at the din that rends th' infernal ſhores,
Tremble the tow'rs of Heav'n, earth rocks her coaſts,
And gloomy Pluto ſhakes with all his ghoſts.
To ev'ry theme reſponds thy various lay;
Here rolls a torrent, there Meanders play;
Sonorous as the ſtorm thy numbers riſe,
Toſs the wild waves, and thunder in the ſkies;
Or ſofter than a yielding virgin's ſigh,
The gentle breezes breathe away and die.
Thus, like the radiant God who ſheds the day,
You paint the vale, or gild the azure way;
And while with ev'ry theme the verſe complies,
Sink without grov'ling, without raſhneſs riſe.
Proceed, great Bard! awake th'harmonious ſtring,
Be ours all Homer! ſtill Ulyſſes ſing.

How long * that Hero, by unſkilful hands,
Strip'd of his robes, a beggar trod our lands?
Such as he wander'd o'er his native coaſt,
Shrunk by the wand, and all the warrior loſt:
O'er his ſmooth ſkin a bark of wrinkles ſpread;
Old age diſgrac'd the honours of his head;
Nor longer in his heavy eye-ball ſhin'd
The glance divine, forth-beaming from the mind.
But you, like Pallas, ev'ry limb infold
With royal robes, and bid him ſhine in gold;
Touch'd by your hand his manly frame improves
With grace divine, and like a God he moves.

Ev'n I, the meaneſt of the Muſes' train,
Inflam'd by thee, attempt a nobler ſtrain;
Advent'rous waken the Mæonian lyre,
Tun'd by your hand, and ſing as you inſpire:
So arm'd by great Achilles for the fight,
Patroclus conquer'd in Achilles' right:
Like theirs, our Friendſhip! and I boaſt my name
To thine united—for thy Friendſhip's Fame.

This labour paſt, of heav'nly ſubjects ſing,
While hov'ring angels liſten on the wing.

* Odyſſey, lib. xvi.

To hear from earth ſuch heart-felt raptures riſe,
As, when they ſing, ſuſpended hold the Skies:
Or nobly riſing in fair Virtue's cauſe,
From thy own life tranſcribe th' unerring laws:
Teach a bad world beneath her ſway to bend:
To verſe like thine fierce ſavages attend,
And men more fierce: when Orpheus tunes the lay
Ev'n fiends relenting hear their rage away.

W. BROOME.

To Mr. POPE,

On the publiſhing his WORKS.

HE comes, he comes! bid ev'ry Bard prepare
The ſong of triumph, and attend his Car.
Great Sheffield's Muſe the long proceſſion heads,
And throws a luſtre o'er the pomp ſhe leads,
Firſt gives the Palm ſhe fir'd him to obtain,
Crowns his gay brow, and ſhews him how to reign.
Thus young Alcides, by old Chiron taught,
Was form'd for all the miracles he wrought:
Thus Chiron did the youth he taught applaud,
Pleas'd to behold the earneſt of a God.

But hark, what ſhouts, what gath'ring crouds rejoice!
Unſtain'd their praiſe by any venal Voice,
Such as th' Ambitious vainly think their due,
When Proſtitutes, or needy Flatt'rers ſue.
And ſee the Chief! before him laurels born;
Trophies from undeſerving temples torn;
Here rage enchain'd reluctant raves, and there
Pale Envy dumb, and ſick'ning with deſpair,
Prone to the earth ſhe bends her loathing eye,
Weak to ſupport the blaze of majeſty.
But what are they that turn the ſacred page?
Three lovely Virgins, and of equal age;
Intent they read, and all enamour'd ſeem,
As he that met his likeneſs in the ſtream:
The GRACES theſe; and ſee how they contend,
Who moſt ſhall praiſe, who beſt ſhall recommend.
The Chariot now the painful ſteep aſcends,
The Pæans ceaſe; thy glorious labour ends.
Here fix'd, the bright eternal Temple ſtands,
Its proſpect an unbounded view commands:
Say, wond'rous youth, what Column wilt thou chuſe,
What laurel'd Arch for thy triumphant Muſe?

Tho' each great Ancient court thee to his ſhrine,
Though ev'ry Laurel thro' the dome be thine,
(From the proud Epic, down to thoſe that ſhade
The gentler brow of the ſoft Leſbian maid)
Go to the Good and Juſt, an awful train,
Thy ſoul's delight, and glory of the Fane:
While thro' the earth thy dear remembrance flies,
"Sweet to the World, and grateful to the ſkies."

SIMON HARCOURT.

To Mr. POPE.

From Rome, 1730.

IMmortal Bard! for whom each Muſe has wove
The faireſt garlands of th' Aonian grove;
Preſerv'd, our drooping Genius to reſtore,
When Addiſon and Congreve are no more;
After ſo many ſtars extinct in night,
The darken'd age's laſt remaining light!
To thee from Latian realms this verſe is writ,
Inſpir'd by memory of ancient Wit:
For now no more theſe climes their influence boaſt,
Fall'n is their glory, and their virtue loſt:

From Tyrants, and from Prieſts, the Muſes fly,
Daughters of Reaſon and of Liberty.
Nor Baiæ now, nor Umbria's plain they love,
Nor on the banks of Nar, or Mincio rove;
To Thames's flow'ry borders they retire,
And kindle in thy breaſt the Roman fire.
So in the ſhades, where chear'd with ſummer rays
Melodious linnets warbled ſprightly lays,
Soon as the faded, falling leaves complain
Of gloomy winter's unauſpicious reign,
No tuneful voice is heard of joy or love,
But mournful ſilence ſaddens all the grove.
  Unhappy Italy! whoſe alter'd ſtate
Has felt the worſt ſeverity of Fate:
Not that Barbarian hands her Faſces broke,
And bow'd her haughty neck beneath their yoke;
Nor that her palaces to earth are thrown,
Her Cities deſert, and her fields unſown;
But that her ancient Spirit is decay'd,
That ſacred Wiſdom from her bounds is fled,
That there the ſource of Science flows no more,
Whence its rich ſtreams ſupply'd the world before.
  Illuſtrious Names! that once in Latium ſhin'd,
Born to inſtruct, and to command Mankind;

Chiefs, by whoſe Virtue mighty Rome was rais'd,
And Poets, who thoſe chiefs ſublimely prais'd!
Oft I the traces you have left explore,
Your aſhes viſit, and your urns adore;
Oft kiſs, with lips devout, ſome mould'ring ſtone,
With ivy's venerable ſhade o'ergrown;
Thoſe hallow'd ruins better pleas'd to ſee
Than all the pomp of modern Luxury.
As late on Virgil's tomb freſh flow'rs I ſtrow'd,
While with th' inſpiring Muſe my boſom glow'd,
Crown'd with eternal bays my raviſh'd eyes
Beheld the Poet's awful Form ariſe:
Stranger, he ſaid, whoſe pious hand has paid
Theſe grateful rites to my attentive ſhade,
When thou ſhalt breathe thy happy native air,
To Pope this meſſage from his Maſter bear:
"Great Bard, whoſe numbers I myſelf inſpire,
To whom I gave my own harmonious lyre,
If high exalted on the Throne of Wit,
Near Me and Homer thou aſpire to ſit,
No more let meaner Satire dim the rays
That flow majeſtic from thy nobler Bays;
In all the flow'ry paths of Pindus ſtray,
But ſhun that thorny, that unpleaſing way;

Nor, when each ſoft engaging Muſe is thine,
Addreſs the leaſt attractive of the Nine.
Of thee more worthy were the taſk to raiſe
A laſting Column to thy Country's Praiſe,
To ſing the Land, which yet alone can boaſt
That Liberty corrupted Rome has loſt;
Where Science in the arms of Peace is laid,
And plants her Palm beneath the Olive's ſhade.
Such was the Theme for which my lyre I ſtrung,
Such was the People whoſe exploits I ſung;
Brave, yet refin'd, for Arms and Arts renown'd,
With diff'rent bays by Mars and Phœbus crown'd,
Dauntleſs oppoſers of Tyrannic Sway,
But pleas'd, a mild AUGUSTUS to obey.
If theſe commands ſubmiſſive thou receive,
Immortal and unblam'd thy name ſhall live;
Envy to black Cocytus ſhall retire,
And howl with Furies in tormenting fire;
Approving Time ſhall conſecrate thy Lays,
And join the Patriot's to the Poet's Praiſe."

PASTORAL POETRY[a].

THERE are not, I believe, a greater number of any ſort of verſes than of thoſe which are called Paſtorals; nor a ſmaller, than of thoſe which are truly ſo. It therefore ſeems neceſſary to give ſome account of this kind of Poem, and it is my deſign to comprize in this ſhort paper the ſubſtance of thoſe numerous diſſertations the Critics have made on the ſubject, without omitting any of their rules in my own favour. You will alſo find ſome points reconciled, about which they ſeem to differ, and a few remarks, which, I think, have eſcaped their obſervation.

The original of Poetry is aſcribed to that Age which ſucceeded the creation of the world: and as the keeping of flocks ſeems to have been the firſt employment of mankind, the moſt ancient ſort of poetry was probably paſtoral[b]. It is natural to imagine, that the leiſure of thoſe antient ſhepherds admitting and inviting ſome diverſion, none was ſo proper to that ſolitary and ſedentary life as ſinging; and that in their ſongs they took occaſion to celebrate their own felicity. From hence a Poem was invented, and afterwards improved to a perfect image of that happy time; which by giving us an eſteem for the virtues of a former age, might recommend them to the preſent. And ſince the life of ſhepherds was attended with more tranquillity than any other rural employment, the Poets choſe to introduce their Perſons, from whom it received the name of Paſtoral.

A Paſtoral is an imitation of the action of a ſhepherd, or one conſidered under that Character. The form of this imitation is dramatic, or narrative, or mixed of both [c]; the fable ſimple, the manners not too polite nor too ruſtic: the thoughts are plain, yet admit a little quickneſs and paſſion, but that ſhort and flowing: the expreſſion humble, yet as pure as the language will afford; neat, but not florid; eaſy, and yet lively. In ſhort, the fable, manners, thoughts, and expreſſions are full of the greateſt ſimplicity in nature.

The complete character of this poem conſiſts in ſimplicity [d], brevity, and delicacy; the two firſt of which render an eclogue natural, and the laſt delightful.

[c] Heinſius in Theocr. P.

If we would copy Nature, it may be uſeful to take this Idea along with us, that Paſtoral is an image of what they call the golden age. So that we are not to deſcribe our ſhepherds as ſhepherds at this day really are, but as they may be conceived then to have been; when the beſt of men followed the employment. To carry this reſemblance yet further, it would not be amiſs to give theſe ſhepherds ſome ſkill in aſtronomy, as far as it may be uſeful to that ſort of life. And an air of piety to the Gods ſhould ſhine through the poem, which ſo viſibly appears in all the works of antiquity: and it ought to preſerve ſome reliſh of the old way of writing; the connection ſhould be looſe, the narrations and deſcriptions ſhort[e], and the periods conciſe. Yet it is not ſufficient, that the ſentences only be brief, the whole Eclogue ſhould be ſo too. For we cannot ſuppoſe Poetry in thoſe days to have been the buſineſs of men, but their recreation at vacant hours.

But with a reſpect to the preſent age, nothing more conduces to make theſe compoſures natural, than when ſome Knowledge in rural affairs is diſcovered[f]. This may be made to appear rather done by chance than on deſign, and ſometimes is beſt ſhewn by inference; leſt by too much ſtudy to ſeem natural, we deſtroy that eaſy ſimplicity from whence ariſes the delight. For what is inviting in this ſort of poetry proceeds not ſo much from the Idea of that buſineſs, as of the tranquillity of a country life.

We muſt therefore uſe ſome illuſion to render a Paſtoral delightful; and this conſiſts in expoſing the beſt ſide only of a ſhepherd's life, and in concealing its miſeries [g]. Nor is it enough to introduce ſhepherds diſcourſing together in a natural way; but a regard muſt be had to the ſubject; that it contain ſome particular beauty in itſelf, and that it be different in every Eclogue. Beſides, in each of them a deſign'd ſcene or proſpect is to be preſented to our view, which ſhould likewiſe have its variety [h]. This variety is obtained in a great degree by frequent compariſons, drawn from the moſt agreeable objects of the country; by interrogations to things inanimate; by beautiful digreſſions, but thoſe ſhort; ſometimes by inſiſting a little on circumſtances; and laſtly, by elegant turns on the words, which render the numbers extremely ſweet and pleaſing. As for the numbers themſelves, though they are properly of the heroic meaſure, they ſhould be the ſmoothest, the moſt eaſy and flowing imaginable.

It is by rules like theſe that we ought to judge of paſtoral. And ſince the inſtructions given for any art are to be delivered as that art is in perfection, they muſt of neceſſity be derived from thoſe in whom it is acknowledged ſo to be. It is therefore from the practice of Theocritus and Virgil (the only undiſputed authors of Paſtoral) that the Critics have drawn the foregoing notions concerning it.

Theocritus excels all others in nature and ſimplicity. The ſubjects of his Idyllia are purely paſtoral; but he is not ſo exact in his perſons, having introduced reapers [i] and fiſhermen as well as ſhepherds. He is apt to be too long in his deſcriptions, of which that of the Cup in the firſt paſtoral is a remarkable inſtance. In the manners he ſeems a little defective, for his ſwains are ſometimes abuſive and immodeſt, and perhaps too much inclining to ruſticity; for inſtance, in his fourth and fifth Idyllia. But 'tis enough that all others learnt their excellencies from him, and that his Dialect alone has a ſecret charm in it, which no other could ever attain.

Virgil, who copies Theocritus, refines upon his original: and in all points, where judgment is principally concerned, he is much ſuperior to his maſter. Though ſome of his ſubjects are not paſtoral in themſelves, but only ſeem to be ſuch; they have a wonderful variety in them, which the Greek was a ſtranger to [k]. He exceeds him in regularity and brevity, and falls ſhort of him in nothing but ſimplicity and propriety of ſtyle; the firſt of which perhaps was the fault of his age, and the laſt of his language.

Among the moderns, their ſucceſs has been greateſt who have moſt endeavoured to make theſe ancients their pattern. The moſt conſiderable Genius appears in the famous Taſſo, and our Spenſer. Taſſo in his Aminta has as far excelled all the Paſtoral writers, as in his Gieruſalemme he has out-done the Epic poets of his country. But as this piece ſeems to have been the original of a new ſort of poem, the Paſtoral Comedy, in Italy, it cannot ſo well be conſidered as a copy of the ancients. Spenſer's Calendar, in Mr. Dryden's opinion, is the moſt complete work of this kind which any nation has produced ever ſince the time of Virgil [1]. Not but that he may be thought imperfect in ſome few points. His Eclogues are ſomewhat too long, if we compare them with the ancients. He is ſometimes too allegorical, and treats of matters of religion in a paſtoral ſtyle, as Mantuan had done before him. He has employed the Lyric meaſure, which is contrary to the practice of the old Poets. His ſtanza is not ſtill the ſame, nor always well choſen. This laſt may be the reaſon his expreſſion is ſometimes not conciſe enough: for the Tetraſtic has obliged him to extend his ſenſe to the length of four lines, which would have been more cloſely confined in the Couplet.

[1] Dedication to Virg. Ecl. P.

In the manners, thoughts, and characters, he comes near to Theocritus himſelf; tho', notwithſtanding all the care he has taken, he is certainly inferior in his Dialect: For the Doric had its beauty and propriety in the time of Theocritus; it was uſed in part of Greece, and frequent in the mouths of many of the greateſt perſons: whereas the old Engliſh and country phraſes of Spenſer were either entirely obſolete, or ſpoken only by people of the loweſt condition. As there is a difference betwixt ſimplicity and ruſticity, ſo the expreſſion of ſimple thoughts ſhould be plain, but not clowniſh. The addition he has made of a Calendar to his Eclogues, is very beautiful; ſince by this, beſides the general moral of innocence and ſimplicity, which is common to other authors of Paſtoral, he has one peculiar to himſelf; he compares human Life to the ſeveral Seaſons, and at once expoſes to his readers a view of the great and little worlds, in their various changes and aſpects. Yet the ſcrupulous diviſion of his Paſtorals into Months, has obliged him either to repeat the ſame deſcription, in other words, for three months together; or, when it was exhauſted before, entirely to omit it: whence it comes to paſs that ſome of his Eclogues (as the ſixth, eighth, and tenth for example) have nothing but their Titles to diſtinguiſh them. The reaſon is evident, becauſe the year has not that variety in it to furniſh every month with a particular deſcription, as it may every ſeaſon.

Of the following Eclogues I ſhall only ſay, that theſe four comprehend all the ſubjects which the Critics upon Theocritus and Virgil will allow to be fit for paſtoral: That they have as much variety of deſcription, in reſpect of the ſeveral ſeaſons, as Spenſer's: that in order to add to this variety, the ſeveral times of the day are obſerv'd, the rural employments in each ſeaſon or time of day, and the rural ſcenes or places proper to ſuch employments; not without ſome regard to the ſeveral ages of man, and the different paſſions proper to each age.

But after all, if they have any merit, it is to be attributed to ſome good old Authors, whoſe works as I had leiſure to ſtudy, ſo I hope I have not wanted care to imitate.

THE FIRST PASTORAL, OR DAMON.

To Sir WILLIAM TRUMBAL.

FIRST in theſe fields I try the ſylvan ſtrains,
Nor bluſh to ſport on Windſor's bliſsful plains:
Fair Thames, flow gently from thy ſacred ſpring,
While on thy banks Sicilian Muſes ſing;

REMARKS.

Theſe Paſtorals were written at the age of ſixteen, and then paſt thro' the hands of Mr. Walſh, Mr. Wycherley, G. Granville afterwards Lord Lanſdown, Sir William Trumbal, Dr. Garth, Lord Hallifax, Lord Somers, Mr. Mainwaring, and others. All theſe gave our Author the greateſt encouragement, and particularly Mr. Walſh, whom Mr. Dryden, in his Poſtſcript to Virgil, calls the beſt Critic of his age. "The "Author (ſays he) ſeems to have a particular genius for this "kind of Poetry, and a judgment that much exceeds his "years. He has taken very freely from the Ancients. But

" he goes on as he hath begun in the Paſtoral way, as Vir-
" gil firſt tried his ſtrength, we may hope to ſee Engliſh
" Poetry vie with the Roman," &c. Notwithſtanding the early time of their production, the Author eſteemed theſe as the moſt correct in the verſification, and muſical in the numbers, of all his works. The reaſon for his labouring them into ſo much ſoftneſs, was, doubtleſs, that this ſort of poetry derives almoſt its whole beauty from a natural eaſe of thought and ſmoothneſs of verſe; whereas that of moſt other kinds conſiſts in the ſtrength and fulneſs of both. In a letter of his to Mr. Walſh about this time we find an enumeration of ſeveral niceties in Verſification, which perhaps have never been ſtrictly obſerved in any Engliſh poem, except in theſe Paſtorals. They were not printed till 1709. P.

But would you sing, and rival Orpheus' strain,
The wond'ring forests soon should dance again,
The moving mountains hear the pow'rful call,

The lowing herds to murm'ring brooks retreat,
To closer shades the panting flocks remove;

author of Comedies; of which the moſt celebrated were the Plain-Dealer and Country-Wife. He was a writer of infinite ſpirit, ſatire, and wit. The only objection made to him was that he had too much. However, he was followed in the ſame way by Mr. Congreve; tho' with a little more correctneſs. P.

VER. 8. The art of Terence, and Menander's fire;] This line alludes to that famous character given of Terence, by Cæſar:

Tu quoque, tu in ſummis, ô dimidiate Menander,
Poneris, et merito, puri ſermonis amator:
Lenibus atque utinam ſcriptis adjuncta foret vis Comica.

So that the judicious critic ſees he ſhould have ſaid—with Menander's fire. For what the Poet meant, was, that his friend had join'd to Terence's art, what Cæſar thought wanting in Terence, namely, the vis comica of Menander. Beſides,—and Menander's fire, is making that the Characteriſtic of Menander which was not. He was diſtinguiſhed for having art and comic ſpirit in conjunction, and Terence having only the firſt part, is called the half of Menander.

VER. 9. Whoſe ſenſe inſtructs us,] He was always very careful in his encomiums not to fall into ridicule, the trap which weak and proſtitute flatterers rarely eſcape. For ſenſe, he would willingly have ſaid, moral; propriety required it. But this dramatic poet's moral was remarkably faulty. His plays are all ſhamefully profligate both in the Dialogue and Action.

When tuneful Hylas with melodious moan,
Taught rocks to weep and made the mountains groan.
Go, gentle gales, and bear my ſighs away!
To Delia's ear the tender notes convey.
As ſome ſad Turtle his loſt love deplores,
And with deep murmurs fills the ſounding ſhores;
Thus, far from Delia, to the winds I mourn,
Alike unheard, unpity'd, and forlorn.
Go, gentle gales, and bear my ſighs along!
For her, the feather'd quires neglect their ſong:
For her, the limes their pleaſing ſhades deny;
For her the lilies hang their heads and die.
Ye flow'rs that droop, forſaken by the ſpring,
Ye birds that, left by ſummer, ceaſe to ſing,
Ye trees that fade when autumn-heats remove,
Say, is not abſence death to thoſe who love?
Go, gentle gales, and bear my ſighs away!
Curs'd be the fields that cauſe my Delia's ſtay;
Fade ev'ry bloſſom, wither ev'ry tree,
Die ev'ry flow'r, and periſh all, but ſhe.
What have I ſaid? where'er my Delia flies,
Let ſpring attend, and ſudden flow'rs ariſe;
Let op'ning roſes knotted oaks adorn,
And liquid amber drop from ev'ry thorn.

Go, gentle gales, and bear my ſighs along!
The birds ſhall ceaſe to tune their ev'ning ſong,
The winds to breathe, the waving woods to move,
And ſtreams to murmur, ere I ceaſe to love.
Not bubbling fountains to the thirſty ſwain,
Not balmy ſleep to lab'rers faint with pain,
Not ſhow'rs to larks, or ſun-ſhine to the bee,
Are half ſo charming as thy ſight to me.

Go, gentle gales, and bear my ſighs away!
Come, Delia, come; ah, why this long delay?
Thro' rocks and caves the name of Delia ſounds,
Delia, each cave and echoing rock rebounds.
Ye pow'rs, what pleaſing phrenzy ſooths my mind!
Do lovers dream, or is my Delia kind?
She comes, my Delia comes!—Now ceaſe my lay,
And ceaſe, ye gales, to bear my ſighs away!

Sacred Eclogue,

In Imitation of VIRGIL's POLLIO.

Advertiſement.

IN reading ſeveral paſſages of the Prophet Iſaiah, which foretell the coming of Chriſt and the felicities attending it, I could not but obſerve a remarkable parity between many of the thoughts, and thoſe in the Pollio of Virgil. This will not ſeem ſurpriſing, when we reflect, that the Eclogue was taken from a Sibylline prophecy on the ſame ſubject. One may judge that Virgil did not copy it line by line, but ſelected ſuch ideas as beſt agreed with the nature of paſtoral poetry, and diſpoſed them in that manner which ſerved moſt to beautify his piece. I have endeavoured the ſame in this imitation of him, though without admitting any thing of my own; ſince it was written with this particular view, that the reader, by comparing the ſeveral thoughts, might ſee how far the images and deſcriptions of the Prophet are ſuperior to thoſe of the Poet. But as I fear I have prejudiced them by my management, I ſhall ſubjoin the paſſages of Iſaiah, and thoſe of Virgil, under the ſame diſadvantage of a literal tranſlation. P.

And the poet underſtood all its force, as appears from the two lines preceding theſe,—Th' Æthereal Spirit, etc. The prophet deſcribes this under the image of rain, which chiefly fits the firſt age of the Goſpel: The poet, under the idea of dew, which extends it to every age. And it was his purpoſe it ſhould be ſo underſtood, as appears from his expreſſion of ſoft ſilence, which agrees with the common, not the extraordinary effuſions of the Holy Spirit. VER. 6. neget quis carmina Gallo? Virg.

The Groves of Eden, vaniſh'd now ſo long,
Live in deſcription, and look green in ſong:
Theſe, were my breaſt inſpir'd with equal flame,
Like them in beauty, ſhould be like in fame.
Here hills and vales, the woodland and the plain,
Here earth and water ſeem to ſtrive again;
Not Chaos-like together cruſh'd and bruis'd,
But, as the world, harmoniouſly confus'd:
Where order in variety we ſee,
And where, tho' all things differ, all agree.
Here waving groves a chequer'd ſcene diſplay,
And part admit, and part exclude the day;
As ſome coy nymph her lover's warm addreſs
Nor quite indulges, nor can quite repreſs.
There, interſpers'd in lawns and op'ning glades,
Thin trees ariſe that ſhun each other's ſhades.
Here in full light the ruſſet plains extend:
There wrapt in clouds the blueiſh hills aſcend.
Ev'n the wild heath diſplays her purple dyes,
And 'midſt the deſert fruitful fields ariſe,

Not proud Olympus yields a nobler ſight,
Tho' gods aſſembled grace his tow'ring height,

Where, in their bleſſings, all thoſe Gods appear.
See Pan with flocks, with fruits Pomona crown'd,
Here bluſhing Flora paints th' enamel'd ground,
Here Ceres' gifts in waving proſpect ſtand,
And nodding tempt the joyful reaper's hand;
Rich Induſtry ſits ſmiling on the plains,
And peace and plenty tell, a STUART reigns.
Not thus the land appear'd in ages paſt,

VER. 33. Not proud Olympus, etc.] Sir J. Denham, in his Cooper's Hill, had ſaid,

Than which a nobler weight no mountain bears,
But Atlas only, which ſupports the ſpheres.

The compariſon is childiſh, as the taking it from fabulous hiſtory deſtroys the compliment. Our Poet has ſhewn more judgment: he has made a manly uſe of as fabulous a circumſtance by the artful application of the mythology.

To ſavage beaſts and ſavage laws a prey,
And kings more furious and ſevere than they;
Who claim'd the ſkies, diſpeopled air and floods,
The lonely lords of empty wilds and woods:
Cities laid waſte, they ſtorm'd the dens and caves,
(For wiſer brutes were backward to be ſlaves,)
What could be free, when lawleſs beaſts obey'd,
And ev'n the elements a Tyrant ſway'd?
In vain kind ſeaſons ſwell'd the teeming grain,
Soft ſhow'rs diſtill'd, and ſuns grew warm in vain;
The ſwain with tears his fruſtrate labour yields,
And famiſh'd dies amidſt his ripen'd fields.
What wonder then, a beaſt or ſubject ſlain
Were equal crimes in a deſpotic reign?

VER. 57, etc.

And makes his trembling ſlaves the royal game.
The fields are raviſh'd from th' induſtrious ſwains,
From men their cities, and from Gods their fanes:
The levell'd towns with weeds lie cover'd o'er;
The hollow winds thro' naked temples roar;
Round broken columns claſping ivy twin'd;

Then, from her roofs when Verrio's colours fall,
And leave inanimate the naked wall,
Still in thy ſong ſhould vanquiſh'd France appear,
And bleed for ever under Britain's ſpear.

Let ſofter ſtrains ill-fated Henry mourn,
And palms eternal flouriſh round his urn.
Here o'er the Martyr-King the marble weeps,
And, faſt beſide him, once-fear'd Edward ſleeps:
Whom not th' extended Albion could contain,
From old Belerium to the northern main,
The grave unites; where ev'n the Great find reſt,
And blended lie th' oppreſſor and th' oppreſt!

Make ſacred Charles's tomb for ever known,

Heav'ns, what new wounds! and how her old

VER. 319. Originally thus in the MS.

Oh fact accurſt! oh ſacrilegious brood,
Sworn to Rebellion, principled in blood!

VER. 309. Henry mourn] Henry VI. P.

VER. 312. once-fear'd Edward ſleeps:] Edward IV. P.

She ſaw her ſons with purple death expire,
Her ſacred domes involv'd in rolling fire,
A dreadful ſeries of inteſtine wars,
Inglorious triumphs and diſhoneſt ſcars.
At length great ANNA ſaid--" Let diſcord ceaſe!"
She ſaid, the world obey'd, and all was Peace!
In that bleſt moment from his oozy bed
Old father Thames advanc'd his rev'rend head;
His treſſes drop'd with dews, and o'er the ſtream
His ſhining horns diffus'd a golden gleam;
Grav'd on his urn appear'd the moon, that guides
His ſwelling waters, and alternate tides;
The figur'd ſtreams in waves of ſilver roll'd,
And on her banks Auguſta roſe in gold.

VARIATIONS.

VER. 325. Thus in the MS.

Till Anna roſe and bade the Furies ceaſe;
Let there be peace—ſhe ſaid, and all was Peace.

Between Verſe 328 and 329, originally ſtood theſe lines,

From ſhore to ſhore exulting ſhouts he heard,
O'er all his banks a lambent light appear'd,
With ſparkling flames heav'ns glowing concave ſhone,
Fictitious ſtars, and glories not her own.
He ſaw, and gently roſe above the ſtream;
His ſhining horns diffuſe a golden gleam:
With pearl and gold his tow'ry front was dreſt,
The tributes of the diſtant Eaſt and Weſt. P.

Around his throne the ſea-born brothers ſtood,
Who ſwell with tributary urns his flood:
Firſt the fam'd authors of his ancient name,
The winding Iſis and the fruitful Tame:
The Kennet ſwift, for ſilver eels renown'd;
The Lodden ſlow, with verdant alders crown'd;
Cole, whoſe dark ſtreams his flow'ry iſlands lave;
And chalky Wey, that rolls a milky wave:
The blue, tranſparent Vandalis appears;
The gulphy Lee his ſedgy treſſes rears;
And ſullen Mole, that hides his diving flood;
And ſilent Darent, ſtain'd with Daniſh blood.

High in the midſt, upon his urn reclin'd,
(His ſea-green mantle waving with the wind)
The God appear'd: he turn'd his azure eyes
Where Windſor-domes and pompous turrets riſe;
Then bow'd and ſpoke; the winds forget to roar,
And the huſh'd waves glide ſoftly to the ſhore.

Hail, ſacred Peace! hail long-expected days,
That Thames's glory to the ſtars ſhall raiſe!
Tho' Tyber's ſtreams immortal Rome behold,
Tho' foaming Hermus ſwells with tides of gold,
From heav'n itſelf tho' ſev'n-fold Nilus flows,
And harveſts on a hundred realms beſtows;

Theſe now no more ſhall be the Muſe's themes,
Loſt in my fame, as in the ſea their ſtreams.
Let Volga's banks with iron ſquadrons ſhine,
And groves of lances glitter on the Rhine,
Let barb'rous Ganges arm a ſervile train;
Be mine the bleſſings of a peaceful reign.
No more my ſons ſhall die with Britiſh blood
Red Iber's ſands, or Iſter's foaming flood:
Safe on my ſhore each unmoleſted ſwain
Shall tend the flocks, or reap the bearded grain;
The ſhady empire ſhall retain no trace
Of war or blood, but in the ſylvan chace;
The trumpet ſleep, while chearful horns are blown,
And arms employ'd on birds and beaſts alone.
Behold! th' aſcending Villa's on my ſide,
Project long ſhadows o'er the cryſtal tide;
Behold! Auguſta's glitt'ring ſpires increaſe,
And Temples riſe, the beauteous works of Peace.

VARIATIONS.

VER. 361. Originally thus in the MS.

Let Venice boaſt her Tow'rs amidſt the Main,
Where the rough Adrian ſwells and roars in vain;
Here not a Town, but ſpacious Realm ſhall have
A ſure foundation on the rolling wave.

NOTES.

VER. 376. And Temples riſe,] The fifty new Churches. P.

I ſee, I ſee, where two fair cities bend
Their ample bow, a new Whitehall aſcend!
There mighty Nations ſhall enquire their doom,
The World's great Oracle in times to come;
There Kings ſhall ſue, and ſuppliant States be ſeen
Once more to bend before a BRITISH QUEEN.
Thy trees, fair Windſor! now ſhall leave their woods,
And half thy foreſts ruſh into thy floods,
Bear Britain's thunder, and her Croſs diſplay,
To the bright regions of the riſing day;
Tempt icy ſeas, where ſcarce the waters roll,
Where clearer flames glow round the frozen Pole;

VARIATIONS.

VER. 383, etc. were originally thus,

Now ſhall our fleets the bloody Croſs diſplay
To the rich regions of the riſing day,
Or thoſe green iſles, where headlong Titan ſteeps
His hiſſing axle in th' Atlantic deeps:
Tempt icy ſeas, etc. P.

NOTES.

VER. 388. Where clearer flames glow round the frozen Pole.] The Poet is here recommending the advantages of commerce, and therefore the extremities of heat and cold are not repreſented in a forbidding manner: as again,

Or under ſouthern ſkies exalt their ſails,
Led by new ſtars, and borne by ſpicy gales.

But in the Dunciad, where the miſchief of Dulneſs is deſcribed, they are painted in all their inclemencies,

See round the Poles, where keener ſpangles ſhine,
Where ſpices ſmoke beneath the burning line.

Or under ſouthern ſkies exalt their ſails,
Led by new ſtars, and borne by ſpicy gales!
For me the balm ſhall bleed, and amber flow,
The coral redden, and the ruby glow,
The pearly ſhell its lucid globe infold,
And Phœbus warm the rip'ning ore to gold.
The time ſhall come, when free as ſeas or wind
Unbounded Thames ſhall flow for all mankind,
Whole nations enter with each ſwelling tide,
And ſeas but join the regions they divide;
Earth's diſtant ends our glory ſhall behold,
And the new world launch forth to ſeek the old.
Then ſhips of uncouth form ſhall ſtem the tide,
And feather'd people croud my wealthy ſide,
And naked youths and painted chiefs admire
Our ſpeech, our colour, and our ſtrange attire!
Oh ſtretch thy reign, fair Peace! from ſhore to ſhore,
'Till Conqueſt ceaſe, and Slav'ry be no more;
'Till the freed Indians in their native groves
Reap their own fruits, and woo their ſable loves,

NOTES.

VER. 396. Unbounded Thames, etc.] A wiſh that London may be made a FREE PORT. P.

Peru once more a race of Kings behold,
And other Mexico's be roof'd with gold.
Exil'd by thee from earth to deepeſt hell,
In brazen bonds, ſhall barb'rous Diſcord dwell:
Gigantic Pride, pale Terror, gloomy Care,
And mad Ambition ſhall attend her there:
There purple Vengeance bath'd in gore retires,
Her weapons blunted, and extinct her fires:
There hated Envy her own ſnakes ſhall feel,
And Perſecution mourn her broken wheel:
There Faction roar, Rebellion bite her chain,
And gaſping Furies thirſt for blood in vain.
Here ceaſe thy flight, nor with unhallow'd lays Touch the fair fame of Albion's golden days:
The thoughts of Gods let GRANVILLE's verſe recite,
And bring the ſcenes of op'ning fate to light.
My humble Muſe, in unambitious ſtrains,
Paints the green foreſts and the flow'ry plains,

Firſt in theſe fields I ſung the ſylvan ſtrains.

ODE for MUSIC

ON

ST. CECILIA'S DAY.

I.

DEſcend, ye Nine! deſcend and ſing;
The breathing inſtruments inſpire,
Wake into voice each ſilent ſtring,
And ſweep the ſounding lyre!
In a ſadly-pleaſing ſtrain
Let the warbling lute complain:
Let the loud trumpet ſound,
'Till the roofs all around
The ſhrill echos rebound:

NOTES.

Ode for Muſic.] This is one of the moſt artful as well as ſublime of our Poet's ſmaller compoſitions. The firſt ſtanza expreſſes the various tones and meaſures in muſic. The ſecond deſcribes their power over the ſeveral paſſions in general. The third explains their uſe in inſpiring the Heroic paſſions in particular. The fourth, fifth, and ſixth, their power over all nature in the fable of Orpheus's expedition to hell; which ſubject of illuſtration aroſe naturally out of the preceding men-

While in more lengthen'd notes and ſlow,
The deep, majeſtic, ſolemn organs blow.
Hark! the numbers ſoft and clear
Gently ſteal upon the ear;
Now louder, and yet louder riſe,
And fill with ſpreading ſounds the ſkies;
Exulting in triumph now ſwell the bold notes,
In broken air, trembling, the wild muſic floats;
'Till, by degrees, remote and ſmall,
The ſtrains decay,
And melt away,
In a dying, dying fall.

II.

By Muſic, minds an equal temper know,
Nor ſwell too high, nor ſink too low.
If in the breaſt tumultuous joys ariſe,
Muſic her ſoft, aſſuaſive voice applies;

NOTES.

tion of the Argonautic expedition, where Orpheus gives the example of the uſe of Muſic to inſpire the heroic paſſions. The ſeventh and laſt conclude in praiſe of Muſic, and the advantages of the ſacred above the prophane.

VER. 7. Let the loud trumpet ſound, etc.] Our Author, in his rules for good writing, had ſaid, that the ſound ſhould be an echo to the ſenſe. The graces it adds to the harmony are obvious. But we ſhould never have ſeen all the advantages ariſing from this rule, had this ode not been written. In which, one may venture to ſay, is found all the harmony that poetic ſound, when it comes in aid of ſenſe, is capable of producing.

Or, when the ſoul is preſs'd with cares,
Exalts her in enliv'ning airs.
Warriors ſhe fires with animated ſounds;
Pours balm into the bleeding lover's wounds:
Melancholy lifts her head,
Morpheus rouzes from his bed,
Sloth unfolds her arms and wakes,
Liſt'ning Envy drops her ſnakes;
Inteſtine war no more our Paſſions wage,
And giddy Factions hear away their rage.

III.

But when our Country's cauſe provokes to Arms,
How martial muſic ev'ry boſom warms!
So when the firſt bold veſſel dar'd the ſeas,
High on the ſtern the Thracian rais'd his ſtrain,
While Argo ſaw her kindred trees
Deſcend from Pelion to the main.
Tranſported demi-gods ſtood round,
And men grew heroes at the ſound,
Enflam'd with glory's charms:
Each chief his ſev'nfold ſhield diſplay'd,
And half unſheath'd the ſhining blade:
And ſeas, and rocks, and ſkies rebound
To arms, to arms, to arms!

IV.

But when thro' all th' infernal bounds,
Which flaming Phlegeton ſurrounds,
Love, ſtrong as Death, the Poet led
To the pale nations of the dead,
What ſounds were heard,
What ſcenes appear'd,
O'er all the dreary coaſts!
Dreadful gleams,
Diſmal ſcreams,
Fires that glow,
Shrieks of woe,
Sullen moans,
Hollow groans,
And cries of tortur'd ghoſts!
But hark! he ſtrikes the golden lyre;
And ſee! the tortur'd ghoſts reſpire,
See, ſhady forms advance!
Thy ſtone, O Siſyphus, ſtands ſtill,
Ixion reſts upon his wheel,
And the pale ſpectres dance!
The Furies ſink upon their iron beds,
And ſnakes uncurl'd hang liſt'ning round their heads.

V.

By the ſtreams that ever flow,
By the fragrant winds that blow
O'er the Elyſian flow'rs;
By thoſe happy ſouls who dwell
In yellow meads of Aſphodel,
Or Amaranthine bow'rs;
By the hero's armed ſhades,
Glitt'ring thro' the gloomy glades;
By the youths that dy'd for love,
Wand'ring in the myrtle grove,
Reſtore, reſtore Eurydice to life:
Oh take the huſband, or return the wife!

He ſung, and hell conſented
To hear the Poet's prayer:
Stern Proſerpine relented,
And gave him back the fair.
Thus ſong could prevail
O'er death, and o'er hell,
A conqueſt how hard and how glorious!
Tho' fate had faſt bound her
With Styx nine times round her,
Yet muſic and love were victorious.

VI.

But ſoon, too ſoon, the lover turns his eyes:
Again ſhe falls, again ſhe dies, ſhe dies!
How wilt thou now the fatal ſiſters move?
No crime was thine, if 'tis no crime to love.
Now under hanging mountains,
Beſide the falls of fountains,
Or where Hebrus wanders,
Rolling in Mæanders,
All alone,
Unheard, unknown,
He makes his moan;
And calls her ghoſt,
For ever, ever, ever loſt!
Now with Furies ſurrounded,
Deſpairing, confounded,
He trembles, he glows,
Amidſt Rhodope's ſnows:
See, wild as the winds, o'er the deſert he flies;
Hark! Hæmus reſounds with the Bacchanals cries--
Ah ſee, he dies!
Yet ev'n in death Eurydice he ſung,
Eurydice ſtill trembled on his tongue,
Eurydice the woods,
Eurydice the floods,
Eurydice the rocks, and hollow mountains rung.

VII.

Muſic the fierceſt grief can charm,
And fate's ſevereſt rage diſarm:
Muſic can ſoften pain to eaſe,
And make deſpair and madneſs pleaſe:
Our joys below it can improve,
And antedate the bliſs above.
This the divine Cecilia found,
And to her Maker's praiſe confin'd the ſound.
When the full organ joins the tuneful quire,
Th' immortal pow'rs incline their ear;
Borne on the ſwelling notes our ſouls aſpire,
While ſolemn airs improve the ſacred fire;
And Angels lean from heav'n to hear.
Of Orpheus now no more let Poets tell,
To bright Cecilia greater pow'r is giv'n;
His numbers rais'd a ſhade from hell,
Her's lift the ſoul to heav'n.

TWO

TO THE Tragedy of BRUTUS*.

CHORUS OF ATHENIANS.

STROPHE I.

YE ſhades, where ſacred truth is ſought;
Groves, where immortal Sages taught:
Where heav'nly viſions Plato fir'd,
And Epicurus lay inſpir'd!
In vain your guiltleſs laurels ſtood
Unſpotted long with human blood.
War, horrid war, your thoughtful Walks invades,
And ſteel now glitters in the Muſes ſhades.

NOTES.

THESE two Chorus's were compoſed to enrich a very poor Play; but they had the uſual effect of ill-adjuſted Ornaments, only to make the meanneſs of the ſubject the more conſpicuous.

* Altered from Skakeſpear by the Duke of Buckingham, at whoſe deſire theſe two Chorus's were compoſed to ſupply as many, wanting in his play. They were ſet many years afterwards by the famous Bononcini, and performed at Buckingham-houſe. P.

VER. 3. Where heav'nly Viſions Plato fir'd, And Epicurus lay inſpir'd!] The propriety of theſe lines ariſes from hence, that Brutus, one of the Heroes of this play, was of the Old Academy; and Caſſius, the other, was an Epicurean: but this had not been enough to juſtify the Poet's choice, had not Plato's ſyſtem of Divinity, and Epicurus's ſyſtem of Morals, been the moſt rational amongſt the various ſects of Greek Philoſophy.

ANTISTROPHE I.

Oh heav'n-born ſiſters! ſource of art!
Who charm the ſenſe, or mend the heart;
Who lead fair Virtue's train along,
Moral Truth, and myſtic Song!
To what new clime, what diſtant ſky,
Forſaken, friendleſs, ſhall ye fly?
Say, will ye bleſs the bleak Atlantic ſhore?
Or bid the furious Gaul be rude no more?

STROPHE II.

When Athens ſinks by fates unjuſt,
When wild Barbarians ſpurn her duſt;
Perhaps ev'n Britain's utmoſt ſhore
Shall ceaſe to bluſh with ſtranger's gore,
See Arts her ſavage ſons controul,
And Athens riſing near the pole!
Till ſome new Tyrant lifts his purple hand,
And civil madneſs tears them from the land.

NOTES.

VER. 12. Moral truth AND myſtic ſong!] He had expreſſed himſelf better had he ſaid,

"Moral truth IN myſtic ſong!"

In the Antiſtrophe he turns from Philoſophy to Mythology; and Mythology is nothing but moral truth in myſtic ſong.

ANTISTROPHE II.

Ye Gods! what juſtice rules the ball!
Freedom and Arts together fall;
Fools grant whate'er Ambition craves,
And men, once ignorant, are ſlaves.
Oh curs'd effects of civil hate,
In ev'ry age, in ev'ry ſtate!
Still, when the luſt of tyrant pow'r ſucceeds,
Some Athens periſhes, ſome Tully bleeds.

CHORUS of Youths and Virgins.

SEMICHORUS.

OH Tyrant Love! haſt thou poſſeſt
The prudent, learn'd, and virtuous breaſt?
Wiſdom and wit in vain reclaim,
And Arts but ſoften us to feel thy flame.
Love, ſoft intruder, enters here,
But entring learns to be ſincere.
Marcus with bluſhes owns he loves,
And Brutus tenderly reproves.
Why, Virtue, doſt thou blame deſire,
Which Nature has impreſt?
Why, Nature, doſt thou ſooneſt fire
The mild and gen'rous breaſt?

CHORUS.

Love's purer flames the Gods approve;
The Gods and Brutus bend to love:
Brutus for abſent Portia ſighs,
And ſterner Caſſius melts at Junia's eyes.

NOTES.

VER. 9. Why, Virtue, etc.] In alluſion to that famous conceit of Guarini,

"Se il peccare è sì dolce," etc.

ODE on SOLITUDE[a].

HAPPY the man, whoſe wiſh and care
A few paternal acres bound,
Content to breathe his native air,
In his own ground.

Whoſe herds with milk, whoſe fields with bread,
Whoſe flocks ſupply him with attire,
Whoſe trees in ſummer yield him ſhade,
In winter fire.

Bleſt, who can unconcern'dly find
Hours, days, and years ſlide ſoft away,
In health of body, peace of mind,
Quiet by day,

Sound ſleep by night; ſtudy and eaſe,
Together mixt; ſweet recreation:
And innocence, which moſt does pleaſe
With meditation.

Thus let me live, unſeen, unknown,
Thus unlamented let me die,
Steal from the world, and not a ſtone
Tell where I lie.

[a] This was a very early production of our Author, written at about twelve years old. P.

AN ESSAY ON CRITICISM.

'TIS hard to ſay, if greater want of ſkill
Appear in writing or in judging ill;
But, of the two, leſs dang'rous is th' offence
To tire our patience, than miſlead our ſenſe.

COMMENTARY.

An Eſſay.] The poem is in one book, but divided into three principal parts or members. The firſt [to ver. 201.] gives rules for the Study of the Art of Criticiſm: the ſecond [from thence to ver. 560.] expoſes the Cauſes of wrong Judgment; and the third [from thence to the end] marks out the Morals of the Critic.

In order to a right conception of this poem, it will be neceſſary to obſerve, that tho' it be intitled ſimply An Eſſay on Criticiſm, yet ſeveral of the precepts relate equally to the good writing as well as to the true judging of a poem. This is ſo far from violating the Unity of the ſubject, that it preſerves and completes it: or from diſordering the regularity of the Form, that it adds beauty to it, as will appear by the following conſiderations: 1. It was impoſſible to give a full and exact idea of the Art of Poetical Criticiſm, without conſidering at the ſame time the Art of Poetry; ſo far as Poetry is an Art. Theſe therefore being cloſely connected in nature, the author has, with much judgment, interwoven the pre-

Some few in that, but numbers err in this,
Ten cenſure wrong for one who writes amiſs;
A fool might once himſelf alone expoſe,
Now one in verſe makes many more in proſe.

'Tis with our judgments as our watches, none
Go juſt alike, yet each believes his own.

COMMENTARY.

cepts of each reciprocally thro' his whole poem. 2. As the rules of the ancient Critics were taken from Poets who copied nature, this is another reaſon why every Poet ſhould be a Critic: Therefore, as the ſubject is poetical Criticiſm, it is frequently addreſſed to the critical Poet. And 3dly, the Art of Criticiſm is as properly, and much more uſefully exerciſed in writing than in judging.

But readers have been miſled by the modeſty of the Title, which only promiſes an Art of Criticiſm, to expect little, where they will find a great deal; a treatiſe, and that no incomplete one, of the Art both of Criticiſm and Poetry. This, and the not attending to the conſiderations offered above, was what, perhaps, miſled a very candid writer, after having given the ESSAY ON CRITICISM all the praiſes on the ſide of genius and poetry which his true taſte could not refuſe it, to ſay, that the obſervations follow one another like thoſe in Horace's Art of Poetry, without that methodical regularity which would have been requiſite in a proſe writer. Spec. N° 235. I do not ſee how method can hurt any one grace of Poetry; or what prerogative there is in Verſe to diſpenſe with regularity. The remark is falſe in every part of it. Mr. Pope's Eſſay on Criticiſm, the Reader will ſoon ſee, is a regular piece: And a very learned Critic has lately ſhewn, that Horace had the ſame attention to method in his Art of Poetry. See Mr. Hurd's Comment on the Epiſtle to the Piſos.

VER. 1. 'Tis hard to ſay, etc.] The Poem opens [from ver. 1 to 9.] with ſhewing the uſe and ſeaſonableneſs of the ſubject. Its uſe, from the greater miſchief in wrong Criticiſm than in ill Poetry; this only tiring, that miſleading the reader: Its ſeaſonableneſs, from the growing number of bad Critics, which now vaſtly exceeds that of bad Poets.

VER. 9.] 'Tis with our Judgments, etc.] The author having

In Poets as true genius is but rare,
True Taſte as ſeldom is the Critic's ſhare;
Both muſt alike from Heav'n derive their light,
Theſe born to judge, as well as thoſe to write.

COMMENTARY.

ſhewn us the expediency of his ſubject, the Art of Criticiſm, inquires next [from ver. 8 to 15] into the proper Qualities of a true Critic: and obſerves firſt, that JUDGMENT alone, is not ſufficient to conſtitute this character, becauſe Judgment, like the artificial meaſures of Time, goes different, and yet each relies upon his own. The reaſoning is concluſive; and the ſimilitude extremely juſt. For Judgment, when it goes alone, is generally regulated, or at leaſt much influenced, by cuſtom, faſhion, and habit; and never certain and conſtant but when founded upon TASTE: which is the ſame in the Critic, as GENIUS in the Poet: both are derived from Heaven, and like the Sun, the natural meaſure of Time, always conſtant and equable.

Nor need we wonder that Judgment alone, will not make a Critic in poetry, when we ſee that it will not make a Poet. And on examination we ſhall find, that Genius and Taſte are but one and the ſame faculty, differently exerting itſelf under different names, in the two profeſſions of Poetry and Criticiſm. For the Art of Poetry conſiſts in ſelecting, out of all thoſe images which preſent themſelves to the fancy, ſuch of them as are truly beautiful. And the Art of Criticiſm in diſcerning, and fully reliſhing what it finds ſo ſelected. 'Tis an exertion of the ſame faculty of the mind in both caſes, and by almoſt the ſame operation. The main difference is, that in the POET, this faculty is eminently joined to a bright imagination, and extenſive comprehenſion, which provide ſtores for the ſelection, and can form that ſelection, by proportioned parts, into a regular whole: In the CRITIC, to a ſolid judgment and accurate diſcernment, which penetrate into the cauſes of an excellence, and ſo, can diſplay that excellence in all its variety of lights. Longinus had taſte in an eminent degree; therefore, this quality, which all true Critics have in common, our Author makes his diſtinguiſhing character,

Thee, bold Longinus! all the Nine inſpire,
And bleſs their Critic with a Poet's fire.

i. e. with taſte or genius.

Let ſuch teach others who themſelves excel,
And cenſure freely who have written well.
Authors are partial to their wit, 'tis true,
But are not Critics to their judgment too?
Yet if we look more cloſely, we ſhall find
Moſt have the ſeeds of judgment in their mind:

COMMENTARY.

VER. 15. Let ſuch teach others, etc.] But it is not enough that the Critic hath theſe natural endowments of judgment and taſte, to entitle him to exerciſe his Art; he ought, as our author ſhews us [from ver. 14 to 19] to give a further teſt of his qualification, by ſome acquired talents: And this, on two accounts: 1. Becauſe the office of a Critic is an exerciſe of Authority. 2. Becauſe he being naturally as partial to his Judgment as the Poet is to his Wit, his partiality would have nothing to correct it, as that of the perſon judged hath, by the very terms. Therefore ſome teſt is neceſſary; and the beſt, and moſt unexceptionable, is his having written well himſelf; an approved remedy againſt Critical partiality; and the ſureſt means of maturing the Judgment, as to reap with glory what Longinus calls "the laſt and moſt perfect fruits of "much ſtudy and experience." The ſentiment is juſt. And if Hobbes's account of Laughter be true, that it ariſes from a ſilly pride, we ſee the reaſon of it. The expreſſion too is fine; it alludes to the condition of Idiots and natural fools, who are obſerved to be ever on the grin.

various depravations, the ſeveral ſorts of bad critics, and ranked them into two general Claſſes; as the firſt ſort, namely the men ſpoiled by falſe learning, are but few in compariſon of the other, and likewiſe come leſs within his main view (which is poetical Criticiſm) but keep groveling at the bottom amongſt words and ſyllables, he thought it enough for his purpoſe here, juſt to have mentioned them, propoſing to do them right hereafter. But the men ſpoiled by falſe taſte are innumerable; and Theſe are his proper concern: He therefore, [from ver. 35 to 46.] ſub-divides them again into the two claſſes of the volatile and heavy: He deſcribes, in few words, the quick progreſs of the One thro' Criticiſm, from falſe wit, to plain folly, where they end; and the fixed ſtation of the Other between the confines of both; who under the name of Witlings, have neither end nor meaſure. A kind of half-formed creature from the equivocal generation of vivacity and dulneſs, like thoſe on the banks of Nile, from heat and mud.

NOTES.

VER: 43. Their generation's ſo equivocal:] It is ſufficient that a principle of philoſophy has been generally received, whether it be true or falſe, to juſtify a poet's uſe of it to ſet off his wit. But, to recommend his argument he ſhould be cautious how he uſes any but the true. For falſehood, when it is ſet too near the truth, will tarniſh what it ſhould brighten up. Beſides, the analogy between natural and moral truth makes the principles of true Philoſophy the fitteſt for this uſe. Our Poet has been pretty careful in obſerving this rule.

To tell 'em, would a hundred tongues require,
Or one vain wit's, that might a hundred tire.
But you who ſeek to give and merit fame,
And juſtly bear a Critic's noble name,
Be ſure yourſelf and your own reach to know,
How far your genius, taſte, and learning go;
Launch not beyond your depth, but be diſcreet,
And mark that point where ſenſe and dulneſs meet.

COMMENTARY.

VER. 46. But you who ſeek, etc.] Our Author having thus far, by way of INTRODUCTION, explained the nature, uſe, and abuſe of Criticiſm, in a figurative deſcription of the qualities and characters of Critics, proceeds now to deliver the precepts of the art. The firſt of which, from ver. 45 to 68. is, that he who ſets up for a Critic ſhould previouſly examine his own ſtrength, and ſee how far he is qualified for the exerciſe of his profeſſion. He puts him in a way to make this diſcovery, in that admirable direction given ver. 51.

AND MARK THAT POINT WHERE SENSE AND DULNESS MEET.

He had ſhewn above, that Judgment, without Taſte or Genius, is equally incapable of making a Critic or a Poet: In whatſoever ſubject then the Critic's Taſte no longer accompanies his Judgment, there he may be aſſured he is going out of his depth. This our Author finely calls, that point where ſenſe and dulneſs meet.

And immediately adds the REASON of his precept; the Author of Nature having ſo conſtituted the mental faculties, that one of them can never greatly excel, but at the expence of another. From this ſtate of coordination in the mental faculties, and the influence and effects they have upon one another, the Poet draws this CONSEQUENCE, that no one Genius can excell in more than one Art or Science. The conſequence ſhews the neceſſity of the precept, juſt as the premiſſes, from which the conſequence is drawn, ſhew the reaſonableneſs of it.

Nature to all things fix'd the limits fit,
And wiſely curb'd proud man's pretending wit.
As on the land while here the ocean gains,
In other parts it leaves wide ſandy plains;
Thus in the ſoul while memory prevails,
The ſolid pow'r of underſtanding fails;
Where beams of warm imagination play,
The memory's ſoft figures melt away.
One ſcience only will one genius fit;
So vaſt is art, ſo narrow human wit:

NOTES.

VER. 51. And mark that point where ſenſe and dulneſs meet.] Beſides the peculiar ſenſe explained above in the comment, the words have ſtill a more general meaning, and caution us againſt going on, when our Ideas begin to grow obſcure: as we are then moſt apt to do; tho' that obſcurity is an admonition that we ſhould leave off; for it ariſes either from our ſmall acquaintance with the ſubject, or the incomprehenſibility of its nature. In which circumſtances a Genius will always write as ſadly as a Dunce. An obſervation well worth the attention of all profound writers.

VER. 56. Thus in the ſoul while memory prevails,
The ſolid pow'r of underſtanding fails;
Where beams of warm imagination play,
The memory's ſoft figures melt away.]

Theſe obſervations are collected from an intimate knowledge of human nature. The cauſe of that languor and heavineſs in the underſtanding, which is almoſt inſeparable from a very ſtrong and tenacious memory, ſeems to be a want of the proper exerciſe of that faculty; the underſtanding being, in a great meaſure, unactive, while the memory is cultivating. As to the other appearance, the decay of memory by the vigorous ex-

COMMENTARY.

VER. 68. Firſt follow Nature, etc.] The Critic obſerving the directions before given, and now finding himſelf qualified for his office, is ſhewn next, how to exerciſe it. And as he was to attend to Nature for a Call, ſo he is firſt and principally to follow her when called. And here again in this, as in the foregoing precept, our Poet [from ver. 67 to 88.] ſhews both the fitneſs and neceſſity of it. I. It's fitneſs, 1. Becauſe Nature is the ſource of Poetic art; this art being only a repreſentation of Nature, who is its great exemplar and original. 2. Becauſe Nature is the end of Art; the deſign of poetry being to convey the knowledge of erciſe of Fancy, the Poet himſelf ſeems to have intimated the cauſe of it in the epithet he has given to the Imagination. For, if, according to the Atomic Philoſophy, the memory of things be preſerved in a chain of ideas, produced by the animal ſpirits moving in continued trains; the force and rapidity of the Imagination, perpetually breaking and diſſipating the links of this chain by forming new aſſociations, muſt neceſſarily weaken and diſorder the recollective faculty.

VER. 67. Would all but ſtoop to what they underſtand. The expreſſion is delicate, and implies what is very true, that moſt men think it a degradation of their genius to uſe it in cultivating what lies level to their comprehenſion, but had rather employ their talents in the ambitious attempt of ſubduing what is placed above it.

COMMENTARY.

Nature in the moſt agreeable manner. 3. Becauſe Nature is the teſt of Art, as ſhe is unerring, conſtant, and ſtill the ſame. Hence the poet obſerves, that as Nature is the ſource, ſhe conveys life to art: As ſhe is the end, ſhe conveys force to it, for the force of any thing ariſes from its being directed to its end: And as ſhe is the teſt, ſhe conveys beauty to it, for every thing acquires beauty by its being reduced to its true ſtandard. Such is the ſenſe of thoſe two important lines,

Life, force, and beauty muſt to all impart,
At once the ſource, and end, and teſt of Art.

II. The neceſſity of the precept is ſeen from hence. The two conſtituent qualities of a Compoſition, as ſuch, are Art and Wit: But neither of theſe attains perfection, 'till the firſt be hid, and the other judiciouſly reſtrained; this only happens when Nature is exactly followed; for then Art never makes a parade; nor can Wit commit an extravagance. Art, while it adheres to Nature, and has ſo large a fund in the reſources which Nature ſupplies, diſpoſes every thing with ſo much eaſe and ſimplicity, that we ſee nothing but thoſe natural images it works with, while itſelf ſtands unobſerv'd, behind: But when Art leaves Nature, miſled either by the bold ſallies of Fancy, or the quaint oddneſſes of Faſhion, ſhe is then obliged at every ſtep to come forward, in a painful or pompous oſtentation, in order to cover, to ſoften, or to regulate the ſhocking diſproportion of unnatural images. In the firſt caſe, our Poet compares Art to the Soul within, informing a beauteous body; but in the laſt, we are bid to conſider it but as a mere outward garb, fitted only to hide the defects of a mis-ſhapen one.—As to Wit, it might perhaps be imagined that this needed only Judgment to govern it: But, as he well obſerves,

Wit and Judgment often are at ſtrife,
Tho' meant each other's aid, like Man and Wife.

They want therefore ſome friendly Mediator; and this Mediator is Nature: And in attending to N. . . Judgment will learn where he ſhould comply with the ch. . . as of Wit; and Wit how ſhe ought to obey the ſage directions of Judgment.

VER. 88. Thoſe Rules of old, etc.] Having thus, in his firſt precept, to follow Nature, ſettled Criticiſm on its true foundation; he proceeds to ſhew, what aſſiſtance may be had from

But, leſt this ſhould be thought to draw the Critic from the ground where our Poet had before fixed him, he previouſly obſerves [from ver. 87 to 92.] that theſe Rules of Art, which he is now about to recommend to the Critic's obſervance, were not invented by the Fancy, but diſcovered in the book of Nature; and that therefore, tho' they may ſeem to reſtrain Nature by Laws, yet as they are Laws of her own making, the Critic is ſtill properly in the very liberty of Nature. Theſe Rules the antient Critics borrowed from the Poets, who received them immediately from Nature.

which was to illuſtrate the beauties of the beſt Writers, in order to excite others to an emulation of their excellence. From the rapture, which theſe Ideas inſpire, the poet is brought back, by the follies of modern Criticiſm, now before his eyes, to reflect on its baſe degeneracy. And as the reſtoring the Art to its original purity and ſplendor is the great purpoſe of his poem, he firſt takes notice of thoſe, who ſeem not to underſtand that Nature is exhauſtleſs; that new models of good writing may be produced in every age; and conſequently, that new rules may be formed from theſe models, in the ſame manner as the old Critics formed theirs, which was, from the writings of the ancient Poets: But men wanting art and ability to form theſe new rules, were content to receive, and file up for uſe, the old ones of Ariſtotle, Quintilian, Longinus, Horace, etc. with the ſame vanity and boldneſs that Apothecaries practiſe, with their Doctor's bills: And then raſhly applying them to new Originals (caſes which they did not hit) it was no more in their power than in their inclination to imitate the candid practice of the Ancients, when

See an example (for want of a better) in a late ridiculous and now forgotten thing, called the Life of Socrates: where the Head of the author (as a man of wit obſerved, on reading the book) has juſt made a ſhift to do the office of a Camera obſcura, and repreſent things in an inverted order; himſelf above, and Sprat, Rollin, Voltaire, and every other writer of reputation, below.

ſafely through every conſiderable work we undertake to examine; and, without which, we may cavil indeed, as the Poet truly obſerves, but can never criticize. We might as well ſuppoſe that Vitruvius's book alone would make a perfect Judge of Architecture, without the knowledge of ſome great maſter-piece of ſcience, ſuch as the Rotonda at Rome, or the Temple of Minerva at Athens; as that Ariſtotle's ſhould make a perfect Judge of wit, without the ſtudy of Homer and Virgil. Theſe therefore he principally recommends to complete the Critic in his Art. But as the latter of theſe Poets has by ſuperficial judges been conſidered rather as a copier of Homer, than an original from Nature, our Author obviates that common error, and ſhews it to have ariſen (as often error does) from a truth, viz. that Homer and Nature were the ſame; and how that the ambitious young Poet, though he ſcorned to ſtoop at any thing ſhort of Nature, when he came to underſtand this great truth, had the prudence to contemplate Nature in the place where ſhe was ſeen to moſt advantage, collected in all her charms in the clear mirror of Homer. COMMENTARY.

VER. 141. Some beauties yet no Precepts can declare, etc.] Our author, in theſe two general directions for ſtudying Nature and her Commentators, having conſidered Poetry as it is, or may be reduced to Rule; leſt this ſhould be miſtaken as ſufficient to attain PERFECTION either in writing or judging, he proceeds [from ver. 140 to 201.] to point up to thoſe ſublimer beauties which Rules will never reach, nor enable us either to execute or taſte: beauties, which riſe ſo high above all precept as not even to be deſcribed by it; but being entirely the gift of Heaven, Art, and Reaſon have no further ſhare in them than juſt to regulate their operations. Theſe Sublimities of Poetry, like the Myſteries of Religion (ſome of which are above Reaſon, and ſome contrary to it) may be divided into two ſorts, ſuch as are above Rules, and ſuch as are contrary to them.

VER. 146. If, where the rules, etc.] The firſt ſort our author

deſcribes [from ver. 145 to 159.] and ſhews, that where a great beauty is in the Poet's view, which no ſtated Rules will direct him how to reach, there, as the purpoſe of rules is only to attain an end like this, a lucky Licence will ſupply the want of them: nor can the Critic fairly object to it, ſince this Licence, for the reaſon given above, has the proper force and authority of a Rule.

VER. 150. Thus Pegaſus, etc.] We have obſerved how the precepts for writing and judging are interwoven throughout the whole Poem. The ſublime flight of a Poet is firſt deſcribed, ſoaring above all vulgar bounds, to ſnatch a Grace directly which lies beyond the reach of a common adventurer. And afterwards, the effect of that Grace upon the true Critic: whom it penetrates with an equal rapidity; going the neareſt way to his heart, without paſſing through his Judgment. By which is not meant that it could not ſtand the teſt of Judgment; but that, as it was a beauty uncommon, and above rule, and the Judgment habituated to determine only by rule, it makes its direct appeal to the heart; which, when once gained, ſoon brings over the Judgment, whoſe concurrence (it being now enlarged and ſet above forms) is eaſily procured. That this is the Poet's ſublime conception appears from the concluding words:

"and all its end at once attains."

For Poetry doth not attain all its end, till it hath gained the Judgment as well as Heart.

From vulgar bounds with brave diſorder part,
And ſnatch a grace beyond the reach of art,
Which without paſſing thro' the judgment, gains
The heart, and all its end at once attains.
In proſpects thus, ſome objects pleaſe our eyes,
Which out of nature's common order riſe,
The ſhapeleſs rock, or hanging precipice.
Great Wits ſometimes may gloriouſly offend,
And riſe to faults true Critics dare not mend.
But tho' the Ancients thus their rules invade,
(As Kings diſpenſe with laws themſelves have made)
Moderns, beware! or if you muſt offend
Againſt the precept, ne'er tranſgreſs its End;
Let it be ſeldom, and compell'd by need;
And have, at leaſt, their precedent to plead.

COMMENTARY.

VER. 159. Great Wits ſometimes may gloriouſly offend, etc.] He deſcribes next the ſecond ſort, the beauties againſt rule. And even here, as he obſerves [from ver. 158 to 169.] the offence is ſo glorious, and the fault ſo ſublime, that the true Critic will not dare either to cenſure or reform them. Yet ſtill the Poet is never to abandon himſelf to his imagination: The rules laid down for his conduct in this reſpect, are theſe; 1. That though he tranſgreſs the letter of ſome one particular Precept, yet that he be ſtill careful to adhere to the end or ſpirit of them all; which end is the creation of one uniform perfect Whole. And 2. That he have, in each inſtance, the authority of the diſpenſing power of the Ancients to plead for him. Theſe rules obſerved, this licence will be ſeldom uſed, and only when he is compelled by need: which will diſarm the Critic, and ſcreen the offender from his laws.

The Critic elſe proceeds without remorſe,
Seizes your fame, and puts his laws in force.
I know there are, to whoſe preſumptuous thoughts
Thoſe freer beauties, ev'n in them, ſeem faults.
Some figures monſtrous and mis-ſhap'd appear,
Conſider'd ſingly, or beheld too near,
Which, but proportion'd to their light, or place,
Due diſtance reconciles to form and grace.

COMMENTARY.

VER. 169. I know there are, etc.] But as ſome modern Critics have had the preſumption to ſay, that this laſt reaſon is only juſtifying one fault by another, our author goes on [from ver. 168 to 181.] to vindicate the Ancients; and to ſhew that this ſeverity of opinion proceeds from mere Ignorance. As where their partiality will not let them ſee that this licence is ſometimes neceſſary for the ſymmetry and proportion of a perfect Whole, from the point, and in the light, wherein it muſt be view'd: or where their haſte will not give them time to obſerve, that a deviation from rule is for the ſake of attaining ſome great and admirable purpoſe.—Theſe obſervations are further uſeful, as they tend to give modern Critics an humbler opinion of their own abilities, and an higher of the Authors they undertake to criticize. On which account he concludes with a fine reproof of that common proverb perpetually in the mouths of the Critics, quandoque bonus dormitat Homerus; miſunderſtanding the ſenſe of Horace, and taking quandoque for aliquando:

Thoſe oft are ſtratagems which errors ſeem,
Nor is it Homer nods, but we that dream.

COMMENTARY.

VER. 181. Still green with bays, etc.] But now fired with the name of Homer, and tranſported with the contemplation of thoſe beauties which a cold Critic can neither ſee nor conceive, the Poet [from ver. 180 to 201.] breaks out into a rapturous exclamation of the rare felicity of thoſe few Ancients who have riſen ſuperior over time and accidents: And diſdaining, as it were, any longer to reaſon with his Critics, offers this as the ſureſt confutation of their cenſures. Then with the humility of a Suppliant at the ſhrine of Immortals, and the ſublimity of a Poet participating of their fire, he turns again to theſe ancient worthies, and apoſtrophiſes their Manes;

" Hail, Bards triumphant!" etc.

COMMENTARY.

ſenſe; which, if it will not of itſelf diſpoſe Moderns to a diffidence of their own (one of the great uſes, as well as natural fruits of that ſtudy) our author, to help forward their modeſty, in his ſecond part ſhews them (in a regular deduction of the cauſes and effects of wrong Judgment) their own bright image and amiable turn of mind.

VER. 201. Of all the cauſes, etc.] Having, in the firſt part, delivered Rules for perfecting the Art of Criticiſm, the ſecond is employed in explaining the Impediments to it. The order of the two parts was well adjuſted. For the cauſes of wrong Judgment being Pride, ſuperficial Learning, a bounded Capacity, and Partiality; They to whom this part is principally addreſſed, would not readily be brought either to ſee the malignity of the cauſes, or to own themſelves concerned in the effects, had not the author previouſly both enlightened and convinced them, by the foregoing obſervations, on the vaſtneſs of Art, and narrowneſs of Wit; the extenſive ſtudy of human Nature and Antiquity; and the Characters of ancient Poetry and Criticiſm; the natural remedies to the four epidemic diſorders he is now endeavouring to redreſs.

Ibid. Of all the cauſes, etc.] The firſt cauſe of wrong Judgment is PRIDE. He judiciouſly begins with this, [from ver. 200 to 215.] as on other accounts, ſo on this, that it is the very thing which gives modern Criticiſm its character; whoſe complexion is abuſe and cenſure. He calls it the vice of Fools, by which is not meant, thoſe to whom Nature has given no Judgment (for he is here ſpeaking of what miſleads the Judgment) but thoſe on whom education and ſtudy has made no improvement; as appears from the happy ſimilitude of an ill-nouriſhed body; where the ſame words which expreſs the cauſe, expreſs likewiſe the nature of PRIDE:

"For as in bodies, thus in ſouls, we find
"What wants in blood and ſpirits, ſwell'd with wind."

Whatever Nature has in worth deny'd,
She gives in large recruits of needful Pride;
For as in bodies, thus in ſouls, we find
What wants in blood and ſpirits, ſwell'd with wind:
Pride, where Wit fails, ſteps in to our defence,
And fills up all the mighty Void of ſenſe.
If once right reaſon drives that cloud away,
Truth breaks upon us with reſiſtleſs day.
Truſt not yourſelf; but your defects to know,
Make uſe of ev'ry friend----and ev'ry foe.

COMMENTARY.

'Tis the buſineſs of Reaſon, he tells us, to diſpell the cloud in which pride involves the mind: But the miſchief is that the rays of reaſon, diverted by ſelf-love, ſometimes gild this cloud, inſtead of diſpelling it. So that the Judgment, by falſe lights reflected back upon itſelf, is ſtill apt to be a little dazzled, and to miſtake its object. He therefore adviſes to call in ſtill more helps:

" Truſt not yourſelf; but your defects to know,
" Make uſe of ev'ry Friend—and ev'ry Foe.

Both the beginning and concluſion of this precept, are remarkable. The queſtion is, of the means to ſubdue Pride: He directs the Critic to begin with a diſtruſt of himſelf; and this is Modeſty, the firſt mortification of Pride: And then to ſeek the aſſiſtance of others, and make uſe even of an Enemy; and this is Humility, the laſt mortification of Pride: For when a man can once bring himſelf to ſubmit to profit by an enemy, he has either already quite ſubdued his Vanity, or is in a fair way of ſo doing.

NOTES.

VER. 209. Pride, where Wit fails, ſteps in to our defence, And fills up all the mighty Void of ſenſe.]

A very ſenſible French writer makes the following remark on this ſpecies of pride. " Un homme qui ſcait pluſieurs

There ſhallow draughts intoxicate the brain,
And drinking largely ſobers us again.

In fearleſs youth we tempt the heights of Arts,

COMMENTARY.

VER. 215. A little learning, etc.] We muſt here remark the Poet's ſkill in his diſpoſition of the cauſes obſtructing true Judgment. Each general cauſe which is laid down firſt, has its own particular cauſe in that which follows. Thus, the ſecond cauſe of wrong Judgment, SUPERFICIAL LEARNING, is what occaſions that critical Pride, which he places firſt.

VER. 216. Drink deep, etc.] Nature and Learning are the pole ſtars of all true Criticiſm: But Pride obſtructs the view of Nature; and a ſmattering of letters makes us inſenſible of our ignorance. To avoid this ridiculous ſituation, the Poet [from ver. 214 to 233.] adviſes, either to drink deep, or not to drink at all; for the leaſt taſte at this fountain is enough to make a bad Critic, while even a moderate draught can never make a good one. And yet the labours and difficulties of drinking deep are ſo great that a young author, "Fir'd with "ideas of fair Italy," and ambitious to ſnatch a palm from Rome, engages in an undertaking like that of Hannibal: Finely illuſtrated by the ſimilitude of an unexperienced traveller penetrating thro' the Alps.

manner of the work criticiſed: Of the matter, in judging by parts, or in having one favourite part to a neglect of all the reſt: Of the manner, in confining the regard only to conceit, or language, or numbers. This is our Poet's order: and we ſhall follow him as it leads us; only juſt obſerving one general beauty which runs thro' this part of the poem; it is, that under each of theſe heads of wrong Judgment, he has intermixed excellent precepts for the right. We ſhall take notice of them as they occur.

He expoſes the folly of judging by parts very artfully, not by a direct deſcription of that ſort of Critic, but of his oppoſite, a perfect Judge, etc. It is obſervable that our Author makes it almoſt the neceſſary conſequence of judging by parts, TO FIND FAULT: And this not without much diſcernment: For the ſeveral parts of a compleat Whole, when ſeen only ſingly, and known only independently, muſt always have the appearance of irregularity; often of deformity: becauſe the Poet's deſign being to create a reſultive beauty from the artful aſſemblage of ſeveral various parts into one natural whole; thoſe

NOTES.

VER. 235. Survey the Whole, nor ſeek ſlight faults to find
Where nature moves, and rapture warms the mind;]
The ſecond line, in apologizing for thoſe faults which the firſt ſays ſhould be overlooked, gives the reaſon of the precept: For when a great writer's attention is fixed on a general view of Nature, and his imagination warm'd with the contemplation of great ideas, it can hardly be but that there muſt be ſmall irregularities in the diſpoſition both of matter and ſtyle, becauſe the avoiding theſe requires a coolneſs of recollection, which a writer ſo qualified and ſo buſied is not maſter of.

But in ſuch lays as neither ebb nor flow,
Correctly cold, and regularly low,
That ſhunning faults, one quiet tenour keep;
We cannot blame indeed---but we may ſleep.
In Wit, as Nature, what affects our hearts
Is not th' exactneſs of peculiar parts;
'Tis not a lip, or eye, we beauty call,
But the joint force and full reſult of all.

COMMENTARY.

VER. 253. Whoever thinks a faultleſs piece to ſee,] He ſhews next [from ver. 252 to 264.] that to fix our cenſure on ſingle parts, tho' they happen to want an exactneſs conſiſtent enough with their relation to the reſt, is even then very unjuſt: And for theſe reaſons, 1. Becauſe it implies an expectation of a faultleſs piece, which is a vain imagination: 2. Becauſe no more is to be expected of any work than that it fairly attains its end: But the end may be attained, and yet theſe trivial faults committed: Therefore, in ſpight of ſuch faults, the work will merit that praiſe that is due to every thing which attains its end. 3. Becauſe ſometimes a great beauty is not to be procured, nor a notorious blemiſh to be avoided, but by ſuffering one of theſe minute and trivial errors. 4. And laſtly, becauſe the general neglect of them is a praiſe; as it is the indication of a Genius, attentive to greater matters.

NOTES.

ſtructures apparently led him into this miſtake of the Architectonic art in general; that the excellency of it conſiſted in raiſing the greateſt weight on the leaſt aſſignable ſupport, ſo that the edifice ſhould have ſtrength without the appearance of it, in order to excite admiration. But to a judicious eye it would have a contrary effect, the Appearance (as our poet expreſſes it) of a monſtrous height, or breadth, or length. Indeed did the juſt proportions in regular Architecture take off from the grandeur of a building, by all the ſingle parts coming united to the eye, as this learned traveller ſeems to inſinuate, it would be a reaſonable objection to thoſe rules on which this Maſter-piece of Art was conſtructed. But it is not ſo. The Poet tells us truly,

"The Whole at once is BOLD and regular."

And if the means be juſt, the conduct true,
Applauſe, in ſpight of trivial faults, is due.
As men of breeding, ſometimes men of wit,
T' avoid great errors, muſt the leſs commit:
Neglect the rules each verbal Critic lays,
For not to know ſome trifles, is a praiſe.
Moſt Critics, fond of ſome ſubſervient art,
Still make the Whole depend upon a Part:
They talk of principles, but notions prize,
And all to one lov'd Folly ſacrifice.

COMMENTARY.

VER. 263. Moſt Critics, fond of ſome ſubſervient art, etc.] II. The ſecond way in which a narrow capacity, as it relates to the matter, ſhews itſelf, is judging by a favorite Part. The author has placed this [from ver. 262 to 285.] after the other of judging by parts, with great propriety, it being indeed a natural conſequence of it. For when men have once left the whole to turn their attention to the ſeparate parts, that regard and reverence due only to a whole is fondly transferred to one or other of its parts. And thus we ſee that Heroes themſelves as well as Hero-makers, even Kings as well as Poets and Critics, when they chance never to have had, or long to have loſt the idea of that which is the only legitimate object of their office, the care and conſervation of the whole, are wont to devote themſelves to the ſervice of ſome favourite part, whether it be love of money, military glory, deſpotic power, etc. And all, as our Author ſays on this occaſion,

"to one lov'd Folly ſacrifice."

This general miſconduct much recommends that maxim in good Poetry and Politics, to give a principal attention to the whole; a maxim which our author has elſewhere ſhewn to be equally true likewiſe in Morals and Religion; as being founded in the order of things: For if we examine, we ſhall find the miſconduct here complained of, to ariſe from this imbecility of our nature, that the mind muſt always have ſomething to reſt upon, to which the paſſions and affections may be intereſtingly directed. Nature prompts us to ſeek it in the moſt worthy object; and common ſenſe points out to a Whole or Syſtem: But Ignorance, and the falſe lights of the Paſſions, confound and dazzle us; we ſtop ſhort, and before we get to a Whole, take up with ſome Part; which from thence becomes our Favourite.

NOTES.

VER. 267. Once on a time, etc.] This tale is ſo very appoſite, that one would naturally take it to be of the Poet's own invention; and ſo much in the ſpirit of Cervantes, that we might eaſily miſtake it for one of the chief beauties of that incomparable Satire. Yet, in truth it is neither; but a ſtory taken by our Author from the ſpurious Don Quixote; which ſhews how proper an uſe may be made of general reading, when if there be but one good thing in a book (as in that wretched performance there ſcarce was more) it may be picked out, and employ'd to an excellent purpoſe.

2. He concludes his obſervations on thoſe two ſorts of Judges by parts, with this general reflection—The curious not knowing are the firſt ſort, who judge by parts, and with a microſcopic ſight (as he ſays elſewhere) examine bit by bit: The not exact but nice, are the ſecond, who judge by a favourite part, and talk of a whole to cover their fondneſs for a part; as Philoſophers do of principles, in order to obtrude notions and opinions in their ſtead.

NOTES.

VER. 285. Thus Critics of leſs judgment than caprice,

COMMENTARY.

But the fate common to both is, to be governed by caprice and not by Judgment, and conſequently to form ſhort ideas, or to have ideas ſhort of truth: Tho' the latter ſort, thro' a fondneſs to their favourite part, imagine that it comprehends the whole in epitome: As the famous Hero of La Mancha, mentioned juſt before, uſed to maintain, that Knight Errantry compriſed within itſelf the quinteſſence of all Science, civil, military, and religious.

Again, true Knowledge is the art of treaſuring up only that which, from its uſe in life, is worthy of being lodged in the memory. But Curioſity conſiſts in a vain attention to every thing out of the way, and which, for its inutility, the world leaſt regards. Laſtly, Exactneſs is the juſt proportion of parts to one another, and their harmony in a whole: But he who has not extent of capacity for the exerciſe of this quality, contents himſelf with Nicety, which is a buſying one's ſelf about points and ſyllables.

Poets, like painters, thus, unſkill'd to trace
The naked nature and the living grace,
With gold and jewels cover ev'ry part,
And hide with ornaments their want of art.
True wit is Nature to advantage dreſs'd;
What oft was thought, but ne'er ſo well expreſs'd;

COMMENTARY.

his attention to a part, when it ſhould be extended to the whole; but he likewiſe judges falſely of that part. And this, as the other, is unavoidable; the parts in the manner bearing the ſame cloſe relation to the whole, that the parts in the matter do; to which whole, the ideas of this Critic have never yet extended. Hence it is, that our Author ſpeaking here of thoſe who confine their attention ſolely to Conceit or Wit, deſcribes the true ſpecies of true and falſe Wit: becauſe they not only miſtake a wrong diſpoſition of true Wit for a right, but likewiſe falſe Wit for true: He deſcribes falſe Wit firſt, [from ver. 288 to 297.]

"Some to Conceit alone," etc.

Where the reader may obſerve our Author's ſkill in repreſenting, in a deſcription of falſe Wit, the falſe diſpoſition of the true; as the Critic by parts is apt to fall into both theſe errors.

He next deſcribes true Wit, [from 296 to 305.]

"True Wit is Nature to advantage dreſs'd," etc.

And here again the reader may obſerve the ſame beauty; not only an explanation of true Wit, but likewiſe of the right diſpoſition of it, which the poet illuſtrates, as he did the wrong, by ideas taken from the art of Painting.

NOTES.

VER. 297. True Wit is Nature to advantage dreſs'd, etc.] This definition is very exact. Mr. Locke had defined Wit to conſiſt "in the aſſemblage of ideas, and putting thoſe together, "with quickneſs and variety, wherein can be found any re- "ſemblance or congruity, whereby to make up pleaſant pic- "tures and agreeable viſions in the fancy." But that great

Something, whoſe truth convinc'd at ſight we find,
That gives us back the image of our mind.
As ſhades more ſweetly recommend the light,
So modeſt plainneſs ſets off ſprightly wit.
For works may have more wit than does 'em good,
As bodies periſh thro' exceſs of blood.
Others for Language all their care expreſs,
And value books, as women men, for dreſs:

COMMENTARY.

VER. 305. Others for Language, etc.] He proceeds ſecondly to thoſe narrow-minded Critics, whoſe whole concern turns upon Language, and ſhews [from ver. 304 to 337.] that this quality, where it holds the principal place, deſerves no commendation; 1. Becauſe it excludes qualities more eſſential. And when the abounding Verbiage has excluded the ſenſe, the writer has nothing to do but to gild over the defect, by giving his words all the falſe colouring in his power.

2. He ſhews, that the Critic who buſies himſelf with this quality alone, is altogether unable to make a right Judgment of it; becauſe true Expreſſion is only the dreſs of Thought; and ſo muſt be perpetually varied according to the ſubject and man-

NOTES.

Philoſopher, in ſeparating Wit from Judgment, as he does in this place, has given us (and he could therefore give us no other) only an account of Wit in general: In which falſe Wit, tho' not every ſpecies of it, is included. A ſtriking Image therefore of Nature is, as Mr. Locke obſerves, certainly Wit: But this image may ſtrike on ſeveral other accounts, as well as for its truth and beauty; and the Philoſopher has explained the manner how. But it never becomes that Wit which is the ornament of true Poeſy, whoſe end is to repreſent Nature, but when it dreſſes that Nature to advantage, and preſents her to us in the brighteſt and moſt amiable light. And to know when the Fancy has done its office truly, the Poet ſubjoins this ad-

" Expreſſion is the dreſs of thought, and ſtill
" Appears more decent, as more ſuitable," etc.

Now as theſe Critics are ignorant of this correſpondence, their whole judgment in Language is reduced to the examination of ſingle words, and generally thoſe which are moſt to his taſte, are (for an obvious reaſon) ſuch as ſmack moſt of Antiquity: On which account our author has beſtowed a little raillery upon it; concluding with a ſhort and proper direction concerning the uſe of words, ſo far as regards their novelty and ancientry.

NOTES.

mirable Teſt, viz. When we perceive that it gives us back the image of our mind. When it does that, we may be ſure it plays no tricks with us: For this image is the creature of the Judgment, and whenever Wit correſponds with Judgment, we may ſafely pronounce it to be true. " Naturam intueamur, hanc " ſequamur: id facillime accipiunt animi quod agnoſcunt." Quint. lib. viii. c. 3.

VER. 311. Falſe eloquence, like the priſmatic glaſs, etc.] This ſimile is beautiful. For the falſe colouring given to objects by the priſmatic glaſs, is owing to its untwiſting, by its obliquities, thoſe threads of light, which Nature had put together in order to ſpread over its works an ingenious and ſimple candor,

But true Expreſſion, like th' unchanging Sun,
Clears and improves whate'er it ſhines upon,
It gilds all objects, but it alters none.
Expreſſion is the dreſs of thought, and ſtill
Appears more decent, as more ſuitable;
A vile conceit in pompous words expreſs'd
Is like a clown in regal purple dreſs'd:
For diff'rent ſtyles with diff'rent ſubjects ſort,
As ſev'ral garbs with country, town, and court.
Some by old words to fame have made pretence,
Ancients in phraſe, meer moderns in their ſenſe;
Such labour'd nothings, in ſo ſtrange a ſtyle, that ſhould not hide, but only heighten the native complexion of the objects. And falſe Eloquence is nothing elſe but the ſtraining and divaricating the parts of true Expreſſion; and then daubing them over with what the Rhetoricians very properly term COLOURS; in lieu of that candid light, now loſt, which was reflected from them in their natural ſtate, while ſincere and entire.

VER. 337. But moſt by Numbers judge, etc.] The laſt ſort are thoſe [from ver. 336 to 384.] whoſe ears are attached only to the Harmony of a poem. Of which they judge as ignorantly and as perverſely as the other ſort did of Eloquence, and for the ſame reaſon. Our Author firſt deſcribes that falſe Harmony with which they are ſo much captivated; and ſhews that it is wretchedly flat and unvaried: for

The firſt uſe of this correſpondence of the ſound to the ſenſe, is to aid the fancy in acquiring a perfecter and more lively image of the thing repreſented. COMMENTARY.

VER. 384. Avoid Extremes, etc.] Our Author is now come to the laſt cauſe of wrong Judgment, PARTIALITY; the parent of the immediately preceding cauſe, a bounded capacity: nothing ſo much narrowing and contracting the mind as prejudices entertained for or againſt things or perſons. This therefore, as the main root of all the foregoing, he proſecutes at large [from ver. 383 to 474.] Firſt, to ver. 394. he previouſly expoſes that capricious turn of Mind, which, by running men into Extremes, either of praiſe or diſpraiſe, lays the foundation of an habitual partiality. He cautions therefore both againſt one and the other; and with reaſon; for exceſs of Praiſe is the mark of a bad taſte; and exceſs of Cenſure, of a bad digeſtion.

COMMENTARY.

VER. 394. Some foreign writers, etc.] Having explained the diſpoſition of mind which produces an habitual partiality, he proceeds to expoſe this partiality in all the ſhapes in which it appears both amongſt the unlearned and the learned.

I In the unlearned, it is ſeen, firſt, In an unreaſonable fondneſs for, or averſion to, our own or foreign, to ancient or modern writers. And as it is the mob of unlearned readers he is here ſpeaking of, he expoſes their folly in a very appoſite ſimilitude:

"Thus Wit, like Faith, by each Man is apply'd
"To one ſmall ſect, and all are damn'd beſide."

But he ſhews [from ver. 396 to 408.] that theſe Critics have as wrong notions of Reaſon as thoſe Bigots have of God: for that Genius is not confined to times or climates; but, as the common gift of Nature, is extended throughout all ages and countries: that indeed this intellectual light, like the material light of the Sun, may not ſhine at all times, and in every place, with equal ſplendor; but be ſometimes clouded with popular ignorance; and ſometimes again eclipſed by the diſcountenance of the Great; yet it ſhall ſtill recover itſelf; and, by breaking thro' the ſtrongeſt of theſe impediments, manifeſt the eternity of its nature.

Thus Wit, like Faith, by each man is apply'd
To one ſmall ſect, and all are damn'd beſide.
Meanly they ſeek the bleſſing to confine,
And force that ſun but on a part to ſhine,
Which not alone the ſouthern wit ſublimes,
But ripens ſpirits in cold northern climes;
Which from the firſt has ſhone on ages paſt,
Enlights the preſent, and ſhall warm the laſt;
Tho' each may feel encreaſes and decays,
And ſee now clearer and now darker days.
Regard not then if Wit be old or new,
But blame the falſe, and value ſtill the true.
Some ne'er advance a Judgment of their own,
But catch the ſpreading notion of the Town;

COMMENTARY.

VER. 408. Some ne'er advance a judgment of their own.] A ſecond inſtance of unlearned partiality, is, (as he ſhews from ver. 407 to 424.) men's going always along with the cry, as having no fixed nor well grounded principles whereon to raiſe any judgment of their own. A third is reverence for names; of which ſort, as he well obſerves, the worſt and vileſt are the idolizers of names of quality; whom therefore he ſtigmatizes as they deſerve. Our Author's temper as well as judgment is here ſeen, in throwing this ſpecies of partiality amongſt the

NOTES.

VER. 402. Which from the firſt, etc.] Genius is the ſame in all ages; but its fruits are various; and more or leſs excellent as they are checked or matured by the influence of Government or Religion upon them. They reaſon and conclude by precedent,
And own ſtale nonſenſe which they ne'er invent.

unlearned Critics: His affection for letters would not ſuffer him to conceive, that any learned Critic could ever fall into ſo low a proſtitution.

VER. 424. The Vulgar thus—As oft the Learn'd—] II. He comes in the ſecond place [from ver. 423 to 452.] to conſider the Inſtances of partiality in the learned. 1. The firſt is Singularity. For, as want of principles, in the unlearned, neceſſitates them to reſt on the common judgment, as always right: ſo adherence to falſe principles (that is, to notions of their own) miſlead the learned into the other extreme of ſuppoſing the common judgment always wrong. And as, before, our Author compared thoſe to Bigots, who made true faith to conſiſt in believing after others; ſo he compares theſe to Schiſmatics,

So much they ſcorn the croud, that if the throng
By chance go right, they purpoſely go wrong:
So Schiſmatics the plain believers quit,

who make it to conſiſt in believing as no one ever believed before. Which folly he marks with a lively ſtroke of humour in the turn of the thought:

" So Schiſmatics the plain believers quit,
" And are but damn'd for having too much wit."

2. The ſecond is Novelty. And as this proceeds ſometimes from fondneſs, ſometimes from vanity; he compares the one to the paſſion for a miſtreſs; and the other, to the pride of being in faſhion: But the excuſe common to both is, the daily improvement of their Judgment:

" Aſk them the cauſe, they're wiſer ſtill, they ſay;
" And ſtill to-morrow's wiſer than to-day"

Now as this is a plauſible pretence for their inconſtancy; and our Author has himſelf afterwards approved of it, as a remedy againſt obſtinacy and pride, where he ſays, ver. 573.

" But you with pleaſure own your errors paſt,
" And make each day a Critique on the laſt,

he has been careful, by the turn of the expreſſion in this place, to ſhew the difference between the pretence and the remedy. For Time, conſidered only as duration, vitiates as frequently as it improves: Therefore to expect wiſdom as the neceſſary attendant of length of days, unrelated to long experience, is vain and deluſive. This he illuſtrates by a remarkable example; where we ſee Time, inſtead of becoming wiſer, deſtroying good letters, to ſubſtitute ſchool divinity in their place—The genius of which kind of learning; the character of its profeſſors; and the fate, which, ſooner or later, always attends whatſoever is wrong or falſe, the poet ſums up in thoſe four lines;

" Faith, Goſpel, all, ſeem'd made to be diſputed," etc.

Some praiſe at morning what they blame at night;
But always think the laſt opinion right.
A Muſe by theſe is like a miſtreſs us'd,
This hour ſhe's idoliz'd, the next abus'd;
While their weak heads like towns unfortify'd,
'Twixt ſenſe and nonſenſe daily change their ſide.
Aſk them the cauſe; they're wiſer ſtill, they ſay;
And ſtill to-morrow's wiſer than to-day.
We think our fathers fools, ſo wiſe we grow;
Our wiſer ſons, no doubt, will think us ſo.
Once School-divines this zealous iſle o'er-ſpread;
Who knew moſt Sentences, was deepeſt read;
Faith, Goſpel, all, ſeem'd made to be diſputed,
And none had ſenſe enough to be confuted:
Scotiſts and Thomiſts, now, in peace remain,
Amidſt their kindred cobwebs in Duck-lane.

COMMENTARY.

And in concluſion, he obſerves, that perhaps this miſchief from love of novelty, might not be ſo great, did it not, along with the Critic, infect the Writer likewiſe; who, when he finds his readers diſpoſed to take ready Wit on the ſtandard of current Folly, never troubles himſelf to think of better payment.

when they load a writer of their own ſide with commendation. They fancy they are paying tribute to merit, when they are only ſacrificing to ſelf-love. But this is not the worſt. He further ſhews, that this party-ſpirit has often very ill effects on Science itſelf; while, in ſupport of Faction, it labours to depreſs ſome riſing Genius, that was, perhaps, raiſed by Nature, to enlighten his age and country. By which he would inſinuate, that all the baſer and viler paſſions ſeek refuge, and find ſupport, in party madneſs.

NOTES.

VER. 463. Milbourn.] The Rev. Mr. Luke Milbourn. Dennis ſerv'd Mr. Pope in the ſame office. But theſe Men are of all times, and riſe up on all occaſions. Sir Walter Raleigh had Alexander Roſs; Chillingworth had Cheynel; Milton a firſt Edwards; and Locke a ſecond; neither of them related to the third EDWARDS of Lincoln's-Inn. They were Divines of parts and learning; This a Critic without one or

For envy'd Wit, like Sol eclips'd, makes known
Th' oppoſing body's groſſneſs, not its own.
When firſt that ſun too pow'rful beams diſplays,
It draws up vapours which obſcure its rays;
But ev'n thoſe clouds at laſt adorn its way,
Reflect new glories, and augment the day.
Be thou the firſt true merit to befriend;
His praiſe is loſt, who ſtays 'till all commend.

COMMENTARY.

VER. 474. Be thou the firſt, etc.] The poet having now gone thro' the laſt cauſe of wrong Judgment, and root of all the reſt, PARTIALITY; and ended his remarks upon it with a detection of the two rankeſt kinds, thoſe which ariſe out of PARTY-RAGE and ENVY; takes the occaſion, which this affords him, of cloſing his ſecond diviſion in the moſt graceful manner, [from ver. 473 to 560.] by concluding from the premiſes, and calling upon the TRUE CRITIC to be careful of his charge, which is the protection and ſupport of Wit. For, the defence of it from malevolent cenſure is its true protection; and the illuſtration of its beauties, is its true ſupport.

He firſt ſhews, the Critic ought to do this ſervice without delay: And on theſe motives. 1. Out of regard to himſelf: For there is ſome merit in giving the world notice of an excellence; but little or none, in pointing, like an Index, to the beaten road of admiration. 2. Out of regard to the Poem: For the ſhort duration of modern works requires, that they

the other. Yet (as Mr. Pope ſays of Luke Milbourn) the faireſt of all critics; for having written againſt the Editor's remarks on Shakeſpear, he did him juſtice in printing, at the ſame time, ſome of his own.

VER. 468. For envy'd Wit, like Sol eclips'd, etc.] This ſimilitude implies a fact too often verified; and of which we need not ſeek abroad for examples. It is this, that frequently thoſe very Authors, who have at firſt done all they could to obſcure and depreſs a riſing Genius, have at length been reduced to borrow from him, imitate his manner, and reflect

Short is the date, alas, of modern rhymes,
And 'tis but juſt to let them live betimes.

When Patriarch-wits ſurviv'd a thouſand years:
Now length of Fame (our ſecond life) is loſt,
And bare threeſcore is all ev'n that can boaſt; ſhould begin to live betimes. He compares the life of modern Wit, (which, in a changeable dialect, muſt ſoon paſs away) and that of the ancient, (which ſurvives in an univerſal language) to the difference between the Patriarchal age and our own: And obſerves, that while the ancient writings live for ever as it were, in braſs and marble, the modern are but like Paintings, which, of how maſterly a hand ſoever, have no ſooner gained their requiſite perfection by the ſoftening, and ripening of their tints, which they do in a very few years, but they begin to fade and die away. 3. Laſtly, our Author ſhews, that the Critic ought to do this ſervice out of regard to the Poet, when he conſiders the ſlender dowry the Muſe brings along with her: In youth 'tis only a ſhort-lived vanity; and in maturer years an acceſſion of care and labour, in proportion to the weight of Reputation to be ſuſtained, and of the increaſe of Envy to be oppoſed: And therefore, concludes his reaſoning on this head, with that pathetic and inſinuating addreſs to the Critic, from 508 to 524.

"Ah! let not learning, etc."

what they could of his ſplendor; merely to keep themſelves in ſome little credit. Nor hath the Poet been leſs artful, to inſinuate alſo what is ſometimes the cauſe. A youthful Genius, like the Sun riſing towards the Meridian, diſplays too ſtrong and powerful beams for the dirty temper of inferior writers, which occaſions their gathering, condenſing, and blackening. But as he deſcends from the Meridian (the time when the Sun gives its gilding to the ſurrounding clouds) his rays grow milder, his heat more benign, and then

Our ſons their fathers' failing language ſee,
And ſuch as Chaucer is, ſhall Dryden be.
So when the faithful pencil has deſign'd
Some bright Idea of the maſter's mind,
Where a new world leaps out at his command,
And ready Nature waits upon his hand:
When the ripe colours ſoften and unite,
And ſweetly melt into juſt ſhade and light;
When mellowing years their full perfection give,
And each bold figure juſt begins to live,
The treach'rous colours the fair art betray,
And all the bright creation fades away!
Unhappy Wit, like moſt miſtaken things,
Atones not for that envy which it brings.

NOTES.

VER. 484. So when the faithful pencil, etc.] This ſimilitude from painting, in which our Author diſcovers (as he always does on that ſubject) real Science, has ſtill a more peculiar beauty, as at the ſame time that it confeſſes the juſt ſuperiority of ancient writings, it inſinuates one advantage the modern have above them; which is this, that in theſe latter, our more intimate acquaintance with the occaſion of writing, and with the manners deſcribed, lets us into thoſe living and ſtriking graces which may be well compared to that perfection of imitation only given by the pencil. While the ravages of Time, amongſt the monuments of former ages, have left us but the groſs ſubſtance of ancient wit; ſo much only of the form and matter of body as may be expreſſed in braſs or marble.

In youth alone its empty praiſe we boaſt,
But ſoon the ſhort-liv'd vanity is loſt:
Like ſome fair flow'r the early ſpring ſupplies,
That gayly blooms, but ev'n in blooming dies.
What is this Wit, which muſt our cares employ?
The owner's wife, that other men enjoy;
Then moſt our trouble ſtill when moſt admir'd,
And ſtill the more we give, the more requir'd;
Whoſe fame with pains we guard, but loſe with eaſe,
Sure ſome to vex, but never all to pleaſe;
'Tis what the vicious fear, the virtuous ſhun,
By fools 'tis hated, and by knaves undone!

If Wit ſo much from Ign'rance undergo,
Ah let not learning too commence its foe!
Of old, thoſe met rewards who could excell,
And ſuch were prais'd who but endeavour'd well:
Tho' triumphs were to gen'rals only due,
Crowns were reſerv'd to grace the ſoldiers too.
Now, they who reach Parnaſſus' lofty crown,
Employ their pains to ſpurn ſome others down;

NOTES.

VER. 507.—by knaves undone!] By which the Poet would inſinuate, a common but ſhameful truth, That Men in power, if they got into it by illiberal arts, generally left Wit and Science to ſtarve.

And while ſelf-love each jealous writer rules,
Contending wits become the ſport of fools:
But ſtill the worſt with moſt regret commend,
For each ill Author is as bad a Friend.
To what baſe ends, and by what abject ways,
Are mortals urg'd thro' ſacred luſt of praiſe!
Ah ne'er ſo dire a thirſt of glory boaſt,
Nor in the Critic let the Man be loſt.
Good-nature and good ſenſe muſt ever join;
To err is human, to forgive, divine.
But if in noble minds ſome dregs remain
Not yet purg'd off, of ſpleen and ſour diſdain;

COMMENTARY.

VER. 526. But if in noble minds ſome dregs remain, etc.] So far as to what ought to be the true Critic's principal ſtudy and employment. But if the ſour critical humour muſt needs have vent, he points to its right object; and ſhews [from ver 525 to 556.] how it may be innocently and uſefully diverted. This is very obſervable; our author had made ſpleen and diſdain the characteriſtic of the falſe Critic, and yet here ſuppoſes them inherent in the true. But it is done with judgment, and a knowledge of Nature. For as bitterneſs and aſtringency in unripe fruits of the beſt kind are the foundation and capacity of that high ſpirit, race, and flavour which we find in them when perfectly concocted by the warmth and influence of the ſun, and which, without thoſe qualities, would gain no more by that influence than only a mellow inſipidity: ſo ſpleen and diſdain in the true Critic, when improved by long ſtudy and experience, ripen into an exactneſs of Judgment and an elegance of Taſte: But, in the falſe Critic, lying remote from the influence of good letters, continue in all their firſt offenſive harſhneſs and acerbity. The Poet therefore ſhews how,

Diſcharge that rage on more provoking crimes,
Nor fear a dearth in theſe flagitious times.
No pardon vile obſcenity ſhould find,
Tho' wit and art conſpire to move your mind;
But Dulneſs with Obſcenity muſt prove
As ſhameful ſure as Impotence in love.
In the fat age of pleaſure, wealth, and eaſe,

COMMENTARY.

after the exaltation of theſe qualities into their ſtate of perfection, the very Dregs (which, tho' precipitated, may poſſibly, on ſome occaſions, riſe and ferment even in a noble mind) may be uſefully employed in branding OBSCENITY and IMPIETY: Of theſe he explains the riſe and progreſs, in a beautiful picture of the different genius's of the two reigns of Charles II. and William III. The former of which gave courſe to the moſt profligate luxury; the latter to a licentious impiety. Theſe are the criminals our Author aſſigns over to the cauſtic hand of the Critic, but concludes however, [from ver. 555 to 560.] with this neceſſary admonition, to take care not to be miſled into unjuſt cenſure; either on the one hand, by a phariſaical niceneſs, or on the other by a conſciouſneſs of guilt. And thus the ſecond diviſion of his Eſſay ends: The judicious conduct of which is worthy our obſervation. The ſubject of it are the cauſes of wrong judgment: Theſe he derives upwards from cauſe to cauſe, till he brings them to their ſource, an immoral partiality: For as he had, in the firſt part,

"trac'd the MUSES upward to their ſpring," and ſhewn them to be derived from Heaven, and the Offspring of Virtue; ſo hath he here purſued this enemy of the Muſes, the BAD CRITIC, to his low original, in the arms of his nurſing mother Immorality. This order naturally introduces, and at the ſame time ſhews the neceſſity of, the ſubject of the third and laſt diviſion, which is, on the Morals of the Critic.

When love was all an eaſy Monarch's care;
Seldom at council, never in a war:
Jilts rul'd the ſtate, and ſtateſmen farces writ:
Nay wits had penſions, and young Lords had wit:
The Fair ſate panting at a Courtier's play,
And not a Maſk went unimprov'd away:
The modeſt fan was lifted up no more,
And Virgins ſmil'd at what they bluſh'd before.
The following licence of a Foreign reign
Did all the dregs of bold Socinus drain;
Then unbelieving Prieſts reform'd the nation,
And taught more pleaſant methods of ſalvation;

NOTES.

VER. 545. Did all the dregs of bold Socinus drain;] The ſeeds of this religious evil, as well as of the political good from whence it ſprung (for good and evil are inceſſantly ariſing from one another) were ſown in the preceding fat age of pleaſure. The miſchiefs done during Cromwell's uſurpation, by fanaticiſm, inflamed by erroneous and abſurd notions of the doctrine of grace and ſatisfaction, made the loyal Latitudinarian divines (as they were called) at the Reſtoration, go ſo far into the other extreme of reſolving all Chriſtianity into Morality, as to afford an eaſy introduction to Socinianiſm: Which in that reign (founded on the principles of Liberty) men had full opportunity of propagating.

VER. 547. The author has omitted two lines which ſtood here, as containing a National Reflection, which in his ſtricter judgment he could not but diſapprove on any People whatever. P.

Where Heav'n's free ſubjects might their rights
diſpute,
Leſt God himſelf ſhould ſeem too abſolute:
Pulpits their ſacred ſatire learn'd to ſpare,
And Vice admir'd to find a flatt'rer there!
Encourag'd thus, Wit's Titans brav'd the ſkies,
And the preſs groan'd with licens'd blaſphemies.
Theſe monſters, Critics! with your darts engage,
Here point your thunder, and exhauſt your rage!
Yet ſhun their fault, who, ſcandalouſly nice,
Will needs miſtake an author into vice;
All ſeems infected that th' infected ſpy,
As all looks yellow to the jaundic'd eye.

III.

LEARN then what MORALS Critics ought to ſhow,
For 'tis but half a Judge's taſk, to know.

COMMENTARY.

VER. 560. Learn then, etc.] We enter now on the third part, the MORALS of the Critic; included in CANDOUR, MODESTY, and GOOD-BREEDING. This third and laſt part is in two diviſions. In the firſt of which [from ver. 559 to 631] our author inculcates theſe morals by precept: In the ſecond [from ver. 630 to the end] by example. His firſt precept [from ver. 561 to 566] recommends CANDOUR, for its uſe to the Critic, and to the writer criticiſed.

NOTES.

VER. 561. For 'tis but half a Judge's taſk, to know.] The Critic acts in two capacities, of Aſſeſſor and of Judge: in the firſt, ſcience alone is ſufficient; but the other requires morals likewiſe.

'Tis not enough, taſte, judgment, learning, join;
In all you ſpeak, let truth and candour ſhine:
That not alone what to your ſenſe is due
All may allow; but ſeek your friendſhip too.
Be ſilent always, when you doubt your ſenſe;
And ſpeak, tho' ſure, with ſeeming diffidence:
Some poſitive, perſiſting fops we know,
Who, if once wrong, will needs be always ſo;

COMMENTARY.

2. The ſecond [from ver. 565 to 572.] recommends MODESTY, which manifeſts itſelf in theſe four ſigns; 1. Silence where it doubts,

Be ſilent always, when you doubt your ſenſe;

2. A ſeeming diffidence where it knows,

And ſpeak, tho' ſure, with ſeeming diffidence;

3. A free confeſſion of error where wrong,

But you with pleaſure own your errors paſt;

4. And a conſtant review and ſcrutiny even of thoſe opinions which it ſtill thinks right,

And make each day a Critique on the laſt.

3. The third [from ver. 571 to 584.] recommends GOOD-BREEDING, which will not force truth dogmatically upon men, as ignorant of it, but gently inſinuates it to them, as not ſufficiently attentive to it. But as men of breeding are apt to fall into two extremes, he prudently cautions againſt them. The one is a backwardneſs in communicating their knowledge out of a falſe delicacy, and for fear of being thought Pedants: The other, and much more common extreme, is a mean complaiſance which thoſe who are worthy of your advice do not want to make it acceptable; for ſuch can beſt bear reproof in particular points, who beſt deſerve commendation in general.

But you, with pleaſure own your errors paſt,
And make each day a Critique on the laſt.

'Tis not enough your counſel ſtill be true;
Blunt truths more miſchief than nice falſhoods do;
Men muſt be taught as if you taught them not,
And things unknown propos'd as things forgot.
Without Good-Breeding, truth is diſapprov'd;
That only makes ſuperior ſenſe belov'd.

Be niggards of advice on no pretence:
For the worſt avarice is that of ſenſe.
With mean complacence ne'er betray your truſt,
Nor be ſo civil as to prove unjuſt.

COMMENTARY.

VER. 584. 'Twere well might Critics, etc.] The Poet having thus recommended, in theſe general rules of Conduct for the JUDGMENT, the three critical Virtues to the HEART; ſhews next [from ver. 583 to 631.] upon what three ſorts of Writers, theſe virtues, together with the advice conveyed under them, would be thrown away; and which is worſe be repaid with obloquy and ſlander. Theſe are the falſe Critic, the dull Man of Quality, and the bad Poet; each of which ſpecies of incorrigible writers he hath very exactly painted.

But having drawn the laſt of them at large, and being always attentive to his main ſubject, which is, of writing and judging well, he re-aſſumes the character of the bad Critic (whom he had touched upon before) to contraſt him with the other; and makes the Characteriſtic common to both, to be a never ceaſing Repetition of their own impertinence.

The Poet—ſtill runs on in a raging vein, etc. ver. 606, etc.
The Critic—with his own tongue ſtill edifies his ears, 614, etc.

Fear not the anger of the wiſe to raiſe;
Thoſe beſt can bear reproof, who merit praiſe.
'Twere well might Critics ſtill this freedom take,
But Appius reddens at each word you ſpeak,
And ſtares, tremendous, with a threat'ning eye,
Like ſome fierce tyrant in old tapeſtry.
Fear moſt to tax an Honourable fool,
Whoſe right it is, uncenſur'd, to be dull;
Such, without wit, are Poets when they pleaſe,
As without learning they can take Degrees.
Leave dang'rous truths to unſucceſsful Satires,
And flattery to fulſome Dedicators,
Whom, when they praiſe, the world believes no more,
Than when they promiſe to give ſcribling o'er.
'Tis beſt ſometimes your cenſure to reſtrain,
And charitably let the dull be vain:
Your ſilence there is better than your ſpite,
For who can rail ſo long as they can write?

NOTES.

VER. 586. And ſtares, tremendous, etc.] This picture was taken to himſelf by John Dennis, a furious old Critic by profeſſion, who, upon no other provocation, wrote againſt this Eſſay and its author, in a manner perfectly lunatic: For, as to the mention made of him in ver. 270, he took it as a Compliment, and ſaid it was treacherouſly meant to cauſe him to overlook this Abuſe of his Perſon. P.

Still humming on, their drouzy courſe they keep,
And laſh'd ſo long, like tops, are laſh'd aſleep.
Falſe ſteps but help them to renew the race,
As, after ſtumbling, Jades will mend their pace.
What crouds of theſe, impenitently bold,
In ſounds and jingling ſyllables grown old,
Still run on Poets in a raging vein,
Ev'n to the dregs and ſqueezing of the brain,
Strain out the laſt dull droppings of their ſenſe,
And rhyme with all the rage of Impotence.

Such ſhameleſs Bards we have; and yet 'tis true,
There are as mad, abandon'd Critics too.
The bookful blockhead ignorantly read,
With loads of learned lumber in his head,
With his own tongue ſtill edifies his ears,
And always liſt'ning to himſelf appears.
All books he reads, and all he reads aſſails,
From Dryden's Fables down to Durfey's Tales.
With him moſt authors ſteal their works, or buy;
Garth did not write his own Diſpenſary.

NOTES.

VER. 619. Garth did not write, &c.] A common ſlander at that time in prejudice of that deſerving author. Our Poet did him this juſtice, when that ſlander moſt prevail'd; and it is now (perhaps the ſooner for this very verſe) dead and forgotten. P.

Name a new play, and he's the Poet's friend,
Nay ſhow'd his faults---but when would Poets

No place ſo ſacred from ſuch fops is barr'd,
Nor is Pauſ's church more ſafe than Paul's church yard:
Nay, fly to Altars; there they'll talk you dead;
For Fools ruſh in where Angels fear to tread.
Diſtruſtful ſenſe with modeſt caution ſpeaks,
It ſtill looks home, and ſhort excurſions makes;
But rattling nonſenſe in full vollies breaks,
And never ſhock'd, and never turn'd aſide,
Burſts out, reſiſtleſs, with a thund'ring tide.
But where's the man, who counſel can beſtow,
Still pleas'd to teach, and yet not proud to know?

VARIATIONS.

VER. 623. Between this and ver. 624.
In vain you ſhrug and ſweat and ſtrive to fly:

To treat of Unities of time and place.

COMMENTARY.

VER. 631. But where's the man, etc.] II. The ſecond diviſion of this laſt part, which we now come to, is of the Morals of Critics by example. For, having in the firſt, drawn a picture of the falſe Critic, at large, he breaks out into an apoſtrophe, containing an exact and finiſhed character of the true, which, at the ſame time, ſerves for an eaſy and proper introduction to this ſecond diviſion. For having aſked [from ver. 630 to 643.] Where's the man, etc. he anſwers [from ver. 642 to 681.] That he was to be found in the happier ages of Greece and Rome; in the perſons of Ariſtotle and Horace, Dionyſius and Petronius, Quintilian and Longinus. Whoſe Characters he has not only juſtly drawn, but has contraſted them with a peculiar elegance; the profound ſcience and logical method of Ariſtotle being oppoſed to the plain common ſenſe of Horace, conveyed in a natural and familiar negligence: the ſtudy and refinement of Dionyſius, to the gay and courtly eaſe of Petronius: and the gravity and minuteneſs of Quintilian to the vivacity and general topics of Longinus. Nor has the Poet been leſs careful, in theſe examples, to point out their eminence in the ſeveral critical Virtues he ſo carefully inculcated in his precepts. Thus in Horace he particularizes his Candour; in Petronius his Good-Breeding; in Quintilian his free and copious Inſtruction; and in Longinus his great and noble ſpirit.

COMMENTARY.

NOTES.

VER. 631. But where's the man, etc.] The Poet, by his manner of aſking after this Character, and telling us, when he had deſcribed it, that ſuch once were Critics, does not encourage us to ſearch for it amongſt modern writers. And indeed the diſcovery of him if it could be made, would be but an invidious affair. However I will venture to name the piece of Criticiſm in which all theſe marks may be found. It is intitled, Q. Hor. Fl. Ars Poetica, et ejuſd. Ep. ad Aug. with an Engliſh Commentary and Notes.

Gen'rous converſe; a ſoul exempt from pride;
And love to praiſe, with reaſon on his ſide?
Such once were Critics; ſuch the happy few,
Athens and Rome in better ages knew.
The mighty Stagirite firſt left the ſhore,
Spread all his ſails, and durſt the deeps explore;
He ſteer'd ſecurely, and diſcover'd far,
Led by the light of the Mæonian ſtar.

VARIATIONS.

Between ver. 646 and 647. I have found the following lines, ſince ſuppreſt by the author:

That bold Columbus of the realms of wit,
Whoſe firſt diſcovery's not exceeded yet.
Led by the Light of the Mæonian Star,
He ſteer'd ſecurely, and diſcover'd far.
He, when all Nature was ſubdu'd before,
Like his great Pupil, ſigh'd and long'd for more:
Fancy's wild regions yet unvanquiſh'd lay,
A boundleſs empire, and that own'd no ſway.
Poets, etc.

NOTES.

VER. 642. With REASON on his ſide, etc.] Not only on his ſide, but in actual Employment. The Critic makes but a mean figure, who when he has found out the beauties of his author, contents himſelf with ſhewing them to the world in only empty exclamations. His office is to explain their nature, ſhew from whence they ariſe, and what effects they produce; or in the better and fuller expreſſion of the Poet,

"To teach the world with REASON to admire."

Poets, a race long unconfin'd, and free,
Still fond and proud of ſavage liberty,
Receiv'd his laws; and ſtood convinc'd 'twas fit,
Who conquer'd Nature, ſhould preſide o'er wit.

Horace ſtill charms with graceful negligence,
And without method talks us into ſenſe,
Will, like a friend, familiarly convey
The trueſt notions in the eaſieſt way.
He, who ſupreme in judgment, as in wit,
Might boldly cenſure, as he boldly writ,
Yet judg'd with coolneſs, tho' he ſung with fire;
His Precepts teach but what his works inſpire.
Our Critics take a contrary extreme,
They judge with fury, but they write with flegm:

NOTES.

VER. 652. Who conquer'd Nature, ſhould preſide o'er Wit.] By this we muſt not underſtand phyſical Nature, but moral. The force of the obſervation conſiſts in giving it this ſenſe. The Poet not only uſes the word Nature for human Nature, throughout this poem; but alſo, where, in the beginning of it, he lays down the principles of the arts he treats of, he makes the knowledge of human nature the foundation of all Criticiſm and Poetry. Nor is the obſervation leſs true than appoſite. For, Ariſtotle's natural enquiries were ſuperficial, and ill-made, tho' extenſive: But his logical and moral works are ſupremely excellent. In theſe he has unfolded the human mind, he has laid open all the receſſes of the heart and underſtanding; and by thoſe he has not only conquered Nature, but, by his Categories, has kept her in tenfold Chains: Not as Dulneſs kept the Muſes, in the Dunciad, to ſilence them; but as Ariſtæus held Proteus in Virgil, to deliver Oracles.

Nor ſuffers Horace more in wrong Tranſlations
By Wits, than Critics in as wrong Quotations.
See Dionyſius Homer's thoughts refine,
And call new beauties forth from ev'ry line!
Fancy and art in gay Petronius pleaſe,
The ſcholar's learning, with the courtier's eaſe.
In grave Quintilian's copious work, we find
The juſteſt rules, and cleareſt method join'd:
Thus uſeful arms in magazines we place,
All rang'd in order, and diſpos'd with grace,
But leſs to pleaſe the eye, than arm the hand,
Still fit for uſe, and ready at command.
Thee, bold Longinus! all the Nine inſpire,
And bleſs their Critic with a Poet's fire.
An ardent Judge, who, zealous in his truſt,
With warmth gives ſentence, yet is always juſt:
Whoſe own example ſtrengthens all his laws;
And is himſelf that great Sublime he draws.
Thus long ſucceeding Critics juſtly reign'd,
Licence repreſs'd, and uſeful laws ordain'd.

COMMENTARY.

VER. 681. Thus long ſucceeding Critics, etc.] The next period in which the true Critic (he tells us) appeared, was at the revival and reſtoration of letters in the Weſt. This occaſions his giving a ſhort hiſtory [from ver. 682 to 709] of the decline

He ſhews that they both fell under the ſame enemy, deſpotic power; and that when both had made ſome little efforts to reſtore themſelves, they were ſoon again over-whelmed by a ſecond deluge of another kind, Superſtition; and a calm of Dulneſs finiſhed upon Rome and Letters what the rage of Barbariſm had begun:

" A ſecond deluge learning thus o'er-run,
" And the Monk finiſh'd what the Goth begun."

When things had been long in this condition, and all recovery now ſeemed deſperate, it was a CRITIC, our Author ſhews us, for the honour of the Art he here teaches, who at length broke the charm of Dulneſs, diſſipated the inchantment, and, like another Hercules, drove thoſe cowl'd and hooded ſerpents from the Heſperian tree of knowledge, which they had ſo long guarded from human approach.

At length Eraſmus, that great injur'd name,
(The glory of the Prieſthood, and the ſhame!)
Stem'd the wild torrent of a barb'rous age,
And drove thoſe holy Vandals off the ſtage.
But ſee! each Muſe, in LEO's golden days,
Starts from her trance, and trims her wither'd bays,

COMMENTARY.

VER. 697.] But ſee! each Muſe, in Leo's golden days.] This preſents us with the ſecond period in which the true Critic appeared; of whom he has given us a perfect idea in the ſingle example of Marcus Hieronymus Vida: For his ſubject being poetical Criticiſm, for the uſe principally of a critical Poet; his example is an eminent poetical Critic, who had written of the art of Poetry in verſe.

NOTES.

VER. 693. At length Eraſmus, etc.] Nothing can be more artful than the application of this example: or more happy than the turn of the compliment. To throw glory quite round the Character of this admirable Perſon, he makes it to be (as in fact it really was) by his aſſiſtance chiefly, that Leo was enabled to reſtore letters and the fine arts in his Pontificate.

VER. 694. The glory of the Prieſthood, and the ſhame!] Our author elſewhere lets us know what he eſteems to be the glory of the Prieſthood as well as of a Chriſtian in general, where, comparing himſelf to Eraſmus, he ſays,

"In MODERATION placing all my glory," and conſequently what he eſteems to be the ſhame of it. The whole of this character belong'd eminently and almoſt ſolely to Eraſmus: For the other Reformers, ſuch as Luther, Calvin, and their followers, underſtood ſo little in what true Chriſtian Liberty conſiſted, that they carried with them, into the reformed Churches, that very ſpirit of perſecution, which had driven them from the church of Rome.

VER. 696. And drove thoſe holy Vandals off the ſtage.] In this attack on the eſtabliſhed ignorance of the times, he ſucceeded ſo well, as to bring good Letters into faſhion: to which he gave new ſplendor, by preparing for the preſs correct editions of many of the beſt ancient writers, both eccleſiaſtical and prophane. But having laughed and ſhamed his age out of one folly, he had the mortification of ſeeing it run headlong into another. The VIRTUOSI of Italy, in a ſuperſtitious dread of that monkiſh barbarity which he had ſo ſeverely handled, would now uſe no term (for now almoſt every man was become a Latin writer) not even when they treated of the higheſt myſteries of Religion, which had not been conſecrated in the Capitol, and diſpenſed unto them from the ſacred hand of CICERO. Eraſmus obſerved the growth of this claſſical folly with the greater concern, as he diſcovered under all their attention to the language of old Rome, a certain fondneſs for its religion, in a growing impiety which diſpoſed them to think irreverently of the Chriſtian Faith. And he no ſooner diſcovered it than he ſet upon reforming it; which he did ſo effectually in the Dialogue, intitled CICERONIANUS, that he brought the age back to that juſt temper, which he had been, all his life, endeavouring to mark out to it: Purity, but not Pedantry, in LETTERS; and Zeal, but not Bigotry, in RELIGION. In a word, by employing his great talents of genius and literature on ſubjects of general importance; and by oppoſing the extremes of all parties in their turns; he completed the rare character of a TRUE CRITIC and an HONEST MAN.

Cremona now ſhall ever boaſt thy name,
As next in place to Mantua, next in fame!
But ſoon by impious arms from Latium chas'd,
Their ancient bounds the baniſh'd Muſes paſs'd.
Thence Arts o'er all the northern world advance,
But Critic-learning flouriſh'd moſt in France;
The rules a nation, born to ſerve, obeys;
And Boileau ſtill in right of Horace ſways.
But we, brave Britons, foreign laws deſpis'd,
And kept unconquer'd, and unciviliz'd;
Fierce for the liberties of wit, and bold,
We ſtill defy'd the Romans, as of old.

COMMENTARY.

VER. 709. But ſoon by impious arms, etc.] This brings us to the third period, after learning had travelled ſtill farther Weſt; when the arms of the Emperor, in the ſack of Rome by the duke of Bourbon, had driven it out of Italy, and forced it to paſs the Mountains—The examples he gives in this period, are of Boileau in France, and of the Lord Roſcommon and the Duke of Buckingham in England: And theſe were all Poets as well as Critics in verſe. It is true, the laſt inſtance is of one who was no eminent poet, the late Mr. Walſh. This ſmall deviation might be well overlooked, were it only for its being a pious office to the memory of his friend: But it may be farther juſtified, as it was an homage paid in particular to the MORALS of the Critic, nothing being more amiable than the character here drawn of this excellent perſon. He being our Author's Judge and Cenſor as well as Friend, it gives him a graceful opportunity to add him-

Yet ſome there were, among the ſounder few

Who durſt aſſert the juſter ancient cauſe,
And here reſtor'd Wit's fundamental laws.

Such was Roſcommon, not more learn'd than good,
With manners gen'rous as his noble blood;

I have here given a ſhort and plain account of the Eſſay on Criticiſm; concerning which, I have but one thing more to acquaint the reader: That when he conſiders the Regularity of the plan, the maſterly Conduct of each part, the penetration into Nature, and the compaſs of Learning throughout, he ſhould at the ſame time know, it was the work of an Author who had not attained the twentieth year of his age.

NOTES.

VER. 723. Such was the Muſe—] Eſſay on Poetry by the Duke of Buckingham. Our Poet is not the only one of his time who complimented this Eſſay, and its noble Author. Mr. Dryden had done it very largely in the Dedication to his tranſlation of the Æneid; and Dr. Garth in the firſt Edition of his Diſpenſary ſays,

" The Tyber now no courtly Gallus ſees,

Tho' afterwards omitted, when parties were carried ſo high in the reign of Queen Anne, as to allow no commendation to an oppoſite in Politics. The Duke was all his life a ſteddy adherent to the Church of England Party, yet an Enemy to the extravagant Meaſures of the Court in the reign of Charles II. On which account, after having ſtrongly patronized Mr. Dryden, a coolneſs ſucceeded between them on that poet's

RAPE of the LOCK.

AN

POEM.

Written in the Year MDCCXII.

TO

Mrs. ARABELLA FERMOR;

MADAM,

IT will be in vain to deny that I have ſome regard for this piece, ſince I dedicate it to You. Yet you may bear me witneſs, it was intended only to divert a few young Ladies, who have good ſenſe and good humour enough to laugh not only at their ſex's little unguarded follies, but at their own. But as it was communicated with the air of a Secret, it ſoon found its way into the world. An imperfect copy having been offer'd to a Bookſeller, you had the good-nature for my ſake to conſent to the publication of one more correct: This I was forc'd to, before I had executed half my deſign, for the Machinery was entirely wanting to compleat it.

The Machinery, Madam, is a term invented by the Critics, to ſignify that part which the Deities, Angels, or Dæmons are made to act in a Poem: For the ancient Poets are in one reſpect like many modern Ladies: let an action be never ſo trivial in itſelf, they always make it appear of the utmoſt importance. Theſe Machines I determined to raiſe on a very new and odd foundation, the Roſicrucian doctrine of Spirits.

I know how diſagreeable it is to make uſe of hard words before a Lady; but 'tis ſo much the concern of a Poet to have his works underſtood, and particularly by your Sex, that you muſt give me leave to explain two or three difficult terms.

The Roſicrucians are a people I muſt bring you acquainted with. The beſt account I know of them is in a French book call'd Le Comte de Gabalis, which both in its title and ſize is ſo like a Novel, that many of the Fair Sex have read it for one by miſtake. According to theſe Gentlemen the four Elements are inhabited by Spirits, which they call Sylphs, Gnomes, Nymphs, and Salamanders. The Gnomes or Dæmons of Earth delight in miſchief; but the Sylphs, whoſe habitation is in the Air, are the beſt condition'd Creatures imaginable. For they ſay, any mortals may enjoy the moſt intimate familiarities with theſe gentle Spirits, upon a condition very eaſy to all true Adepts, an inviolate preſervation of Chaſtity.

As to the following Canto's, all the paſſages of them are as fabulous, as the Viſion at the beginning, or the Transformation at the end; (except the loſs of your Hair, which I always mention with reverence.) The Human perſons are as fictitious as the Airy ones; and the Character of Belinda, as it is now manag'd, reſembles you in nothing but in Beauty.

If this Poem had as many Graces as there are in your Perſon, or in your Mind, yet I could never hope it ſhould paſs thro' the world half ſo Uncenſured as You have done. But let its fortune be what it will, mine is happy enough, to have given me this occaſion of aſſuring you that I am, with the trueſt eſteem,

MADAM,

Your moſt obedient, humble Servant,

A. POPE.

NOTES.

* It appears by this Motto, that the following Poem was written or publiſhed at the Lady's requeſt. But there are ſome further circumſtances not unworthy relating. Mr. Caryl (a Gentleman who was Secretary to Queen Mary, wife of James II. whoſe fortunes he followed into France, Author of the Comedy of Sir Solomon Single, and of ſeveral tranſlations in Dryden's Miſcellanies) originally propoſed the ſubject to him, in a view of putting an end by this piece of ridicule, to a quarrel that was riſen between two noble Families, thoſe of Lord Petre and of Mrs. Fermor, on the trifling occaſion of his having cut off a lock of her hair. The Author ſent it to the Lady, with whom he was acquainted; and ſhe took it ſo well as to give about copies of it. That firſt ſketch (we learn from one of his Letters) was written in leſs than a fortnight, in 1711, in two Cantos only, and it was ſo printed; firſt, in a Miſcellany of Bern. Lintot's, without the name of the Au-

Slight is the ſubject, but not ſo the praiſe,
If She inſpire, and He approve my lays.
Say what ſtrange motive, Goddeſs! could compel
A well-bred Lord t' aſſault a gentle Belle?
O ſay what ſtranger cauſe, yet unexplor'd,
Could make a gentle Belle reject a Lord?
In taſks ſo bold, can little men engage,
And in ſoft boſoms, dwells ſuch mighty Rage?
Sol thro' white curtains ſhot a tim'rous ray,
And ope'd thoſe eyes that muſt eclipſe the day:

thor. But it was received ſo well, that he made it more conſiderable the next year by the addition of the machinery of the Sylphs, and extended it to five Canto's. We ſhall give the reader the pleaſure of ſeeing in what manner theſe additions were inſerted, ſo as to ſeem not to be added, but to grow out of the Poem. See Notes, Cant. I. ver. 19, etc. P.

This inſertion he always eſteemed, and juſtly, the greateſt effort of his ſkill and art as a Poet.

Now lap-dogs give themſelves the rouſing ſhake,
And ſleepleſs lovers, juſt at twelve, awake:
Thrice rung the bell, the ſlipper knock'd the ground,
And the preſs'd watch return'd a ſilver ſound.

Her guardian SYLPH prolong'd the balmy reſt:

The morning-dream that hover'd o'er her head,

NOTES.

VER. 19. Belinda ſtill, etc.] All theſe verſes from hence to the end of this Canto were added afterwards. P.

VER. 20. Her Guardian Sylph] When Mr. Pope had projected to give The Rape of the Lock its preſent form of a mock-heroic poem, he was obliged to find it with its Machinery. For as the ſubject of the Epic conſiſts of two parts, the metaphyſical and the civil; ſo this mock epic, which is of the ſatyric kind, and receives its grace from a ludicrous mimicry of the other's pomp and ſolemnity, was to have the like compoſition. And, as the civil part is intentionally debaſed by the choice of a trifling action: ſo ſhould the metaphyſical, by the application of ſome very extravagant ſyſtem. A rule, which tho' neither Boileau nor Garth had been careful enough to attend to, our Author's good ſenſe would not ſuffer him to overlook. And that ſort of Machinery which his judgment taught him was only fit for his uſe, his admirable INVENTION ſoon ſupplied. There was but one Syſtem in all nature which was to his purpoſe, the ROSICRUCIAN PHILOSOPHY; and this by the effort of a well-directed imagination, he preſently ſeized upon. The fanatic Alchemiſts in their ſearch after the great ſecret, had invented a means altogether ſuitable to their end. It was a kind of Theological Philoſophy, made up in a mixture of almoſt equal parts of Pagan Platoniſm, Chriſtian Quietiſm, and the Jewiſh Cabbala; a mixture monſtrous enough to fright Reaſon from human commerce. This ſyſtem, he tells us, he took as he found it in a little French tract called, Le Comte de Gabalis. The book is written in Dia-

A Youth more glitt'ring than a Birth-night Beau,
(That ev'n in ſlumber caus'd her cheek to glow)
Seem'd to her ear his winning lips to lay,
And thus in whiſpers ſaid, or ſeem'd to ſay.
Faireſt of mortals, thou diſtinguiſh'd care
Of thouſand bright Inhabitants of Air!
If e'er one Viſion touch thy infant thought,
Of all the Nurſe and all the Prieſt have taught;
Of airy Elves by moonlight ſhadows ſeen,
The ſilver token, and the circled green,
Or virgins viſited by Angel-pow'rs,
With golden crowns and wreaths of heav'nly flow'rs;

NOTES.

logue, and is a delicate and very ingenious piece of raillery by the Abbé Villiers, on that inviſible ſect, of which, the ſtories that went about at that time, made a great deal of noiſe at Paris. But, as in this ſatirical Dialogue, Mr. P. found ſeveral whimſies of a very high myſterious nature, told of theſe elementary Beings, which were very unfit to come into the machinery of ſuch a ſort of poem, he has, in their ſtead, with great judgment introduced the Legendary ſtories of Guardian Angels, and the Nurſery Tales of the Fairies; and artfully accommodated them, to the reſt of the Roſicrucian Syſtem. And to this artful addreſs (unleſs we will be ſo uncharitable to think he intended to give a needleſs ſcandal) we muſt ſuppoſe he referred, in theſe two lines,

"If e'er one Viſion touch'd thy infant thought,
"Of all the nurſe, and all the prieſt have taught."

Thus, by the moſt beautiful invention imaginable, he has contrived, that, as in the ſerious Epic, the popular belief ſupports the Machinery; ſo, in his mock epic, the Machinery, taken from a circumſtance the moſt humbling to reaſon, in all philoſophic fanaticiſm, ſhould be employed to diſmount learned pride and arrogance.

Hear and believe! thy own importance know,
Nor bound thy narrow views to things below.
Some ſecret truths, from learned pride conceal'd,
To Maids alone and Children are reveal'd:
What tho' no credit doubting Wits may give?
The Fair and Innocent ſhall ſtill believe.
Know then, unnumber'd Spirits round thee fly,
The light Militia of the lower ſky:
Theſe, tho' unſeen, are ever on the wing,
Hang o'er the Box, and hover round the Ring.
Think what an equipage thou haſt in Air,
And view with ſcorn two Pages and a Chair.
As now your own, our beings were of old,
And once inclos'd in Woman's beauteous mould;
Thence, by a ſoft tranſition, we repair
From earthly Vehicles to theſe of air.
Think not, when Woman's tranſient breath is fled,
That all her vanities at once are dead;

NOTES.

VER. 47. As now your own, etc.] The Poet here forſakes the Roſicrucian ſyſtem; which, in this part, is too extravagant even for ludicrous Poetry; and gives a beautiful fiction of his own, on the Platonic Theology, of the continuance of the paſſions in another ſtate, when the mind, before its leaving this, has not been well purged and purified by philoſophy; which furniſhes an occaſion for much uſeful ſatire.

Succeeding vanities ſhe ſtill regards,
And tho' ſhe plays no more, o'erlooks the cards.
Her joy in gilded Chariots, when alive,
And love of Ombre, after death ſurvive.
For when the Fair in all their pride expire,
To their firſt elements their Souls retire:
The Sprites of fiery Termagants in Flame
Mount up, and take a Salamander's name.
Soft yielding minds to Water glide away,
And ſip, with Nymphs, their elemental Tea.
The graver Prude ſinks downward to a Gnome,
In ſearch of miſchief ſtill on Earth to roam.
The light Coquettes in Sylphs aloft repair,
And ſport and flutter in the fields of Air.

Know farther yet; whoever fair and chaſte
Rejects mankind, is by ſome Sylph embrac'd:
For Spirits, freed from mortal laws, with eaſe
Aſſume what ſexes and what ſhapes they pleaſe.

NOTES.

VER. 68. is by ſome Sylph embrac'd:] Here again the Author reſumes the Roſicrucian ſyſtem. But this tenet, peculiar to that wild philoſophy, was founded on a principle very unfit to be employed in ſuch a ſort of poem, and therefore ſuppreſſed, tho' a leſs judicious writer would have been tempted to expatiate upon it.

Safe from the treach'rous friend, the daring ſpark,

And in ſoft ſounds, YOUR GRACE ſalutes their ear.

Which Jews might kiſs, and Infidels adore.
Her lively looks a ſprightly mind diſcloſe,
Quick as her eyes, and as unfix'd as thoſe:
Favours to none, to all ſhe ſmiles extends;
Oft ſhe rejects, but never once offends.
Bright as the ſun, her eyes the gazers ſtrike,
And, like the ſun, they ſhine on all alike.

VER. 4. Launch'd on the boſom, etc.] From hence the poem continues, in the firſt Edition, to ver. 46.

Yet graceful eaſe, and ſweetneſs void of pride,
Might hide her faults, if Belles had faults to hide:
If to her ſhare ſome female errors fall,
Look on her face, and you'll forget 'em all.

This Nymph, to the deſtruction of mankind,
Nouriſh'd two Locks, which graceful hung behind
In equal curls, and well conſpir'd to deck
With ſhining ringlets the ſmooth iv'ry neck.
Love in theſe labyrinths his ſlaves detains,
And mighty hearts are held in ſlender chains.
With hairy ſpringes we the birds betray,
Slight lines of hair ſurprize the finny prey,
Fair treſſes man's imperial race inſnare,
And beauty draws us with a ſingle hair.

Th'advent'rous Baron the bright locks admir'd;
He ſaw, he wiſh'd, and to the prize aſpir'd.
Reſolv'd to win, he meditates the way,
By force to raviſh, or by fraud betray;

NOTES.

VER. 25. With hairy ſpringes.] In alluſion to Anacreon's manner.

VER. 28. with a ſingle hair.] In alluſion to thoſe lines of Hudibras, applied to the ſame purpoſe,

"And tho' it be a two foot Trout,
"'Tis with a ſingle hair pull'd out."

For when ſucceſs a Lover's toil attends,
Few aſk, if fraud or force attain'd his ends.
For this, ere Phœbus roſe, he had implor'd
Propitious heav'n, and ev'ry pow'r ador'd,
But chiefly Love—to Love an Altar built,
Of twelve vaſt French Romances, neatly gilt.
There lay three garters, half a pair of gloves;
And all the trophies of his former loves;
With tender billet-doux he lights the pyre,
And breathes three am'rous ſighs to raiſe the fire.
Then proſtrate falls, and begs with ardent eyes
Soon to obtain, and long poſſeſs the prize:
The pow'rs gave ear, and granted half his pray'r,
The reſt, the winds diſpers'd in empty air.
But now ſecure the painted veſſel glides,
The ſun-beams trembling on the floating tides:
While melting muſic ſteals upon the ſky,
And ſoften'd ſounds along the waters die;
Smooth flow the waves, the zephyrs gently play,
Belinda ſmil'd, and all the world was gay.
All but the Sylph—with careful thoughts oppreſt,
Th' impending woe ſat heavy on his breaſt.

IMITATIONS.

VER. 45. The pow'rs gave ear,] Virg. Æn. xi. P.

He ſummons ſtrait his Denizens of air;
The lucid ſquadrons round the ſails repair:
Soft o'er the ſhrouds aërial whiſpers breathe,
That ſeem'd but Zephyrs to the train beneath.
Some to the ſun their inſect-wings unfold,
Waft on the breeze, or ſink in clouds of gold;
Tranſparent forms, too fine for mortal ſight,
Their fluid bodies half diſſolv'd in light.
Looſe to the wind their airy garments flew,
Thin glitt'ring textures of the filmy dew,
Dipt in the richeſt tincture of the ſkies,
Where light diſports in ever-mingling dyes;
While ev'ry beam new tranſient colours flings,
Colours that change whene'er they wave their wings.
Amid the circle, on the gilded maſt,
Superior by the head, was Ariel plac'd;
His purple pinions op'ning to the ſun,
He rais'd his azure wand, and thus begun.

Ye Sylphs and Sylphids, to your chief give ear,
Fays, Fairies, Genii, Elves, and Dæmons hear!
Ye know the ſpheres, and various taſks aſſign'd
By laws eternal to th' aërial kind.
Some in the fields of pureſt Æther play,
And baſk and whiten in the blaze of day.

Some guide the courſe of wand'ring orbs on high,
Or roll the planets thro' the boundleſs ſky.
Some leſs refin'd, beneath the moon's pale light
Purſue the ſtars that ſhoot athwart the night,
Or ſuck the miſts in groſſer air below,
Or dip their pinions in the painted bow,
Or brew fierce tempeſts on the wintry main,
Or o'er the glebe diſtil the kindly rain.
Others on earth o'er human race preſide,
Watch all their ways, and all their actions guide:
Of theſe the chief the care of Nations own,
And guard with Arms divine the Britiſh Throne.
Our humbler province is to tend the Fair,
Not a leſs pleaſing, tho' leſs glorious care;
To ſave the powder from too rude a gale,
Nor let th' impriſon'd eſſences exhale;
To draw freſh colours from the vernal flow'rs;
To ſteal from Rainbows ere they drop in ſhow'rs

NOTES.

VER. 90. And guard with Arms] The Poet was too judicious to deſire this ſhould be underſtood as a compliment. He intended it for a meer piece of raillery; ſuch as he more openly purſues on another occaſion; when he ſays,

"Where's now the Star which lighted Charles to riſe?
"With that which follow'd Julius to the ſkies.
"Angels, that watch'd the Royal Oak ſo well,
"How chanc'd you ſlept when luckleſs Sorrel fell?"

A brighter waſh; to curl their waving hairs,
Aſſiſt their bluſhes, and inſpire their airs;
Nay oft, in dreams, invention we beſtow,
To change a Flounce, or add a Furbelow.
This day, black Omens threat the brighteſt Fair
That e'er deſerv'd a watchful ſpirit's care;
Some dire diſaſter, or by force, or ſlight;
But what, or where, the fates have wrapt in night.
Whether the nymph ſhall break Diana's law,
Or ſome frail China jar receive a flaw;
Or ſtain her honour, or her new brocade;
Forget her pray'rs, or miſs a maſquerade;
Or loſe her heart, or necklace, at a ball;
Or whether Heav'n has doom'd that Shock muſt fall.
Haſte then, ye ſpirits! to your charge repair:
The flutt'ring fan be Zephyretta's care;
The drops to thee, Brillante, we conſign;
And, Momentilla, let the watch be thine;
Do thou, Criſpiſſa, tend her fav'rite Lock;
Ariel himſelf ſhall be the guard of Shock.

NOTES.

VER. 105. Whether the nymph, etc.] The diſaſter, which makes the ſubject of this poem, being a trifle, taken ſeriouſly; it naturally led the Poet into this fine ſatire on the female eſtimate of human miſchances.

To fifty choſen Sylphs, of ſpecial note,
We truſt th' important charge, the Petticoat:
Oft have we known that ſeven-fold fence to fail,
Tho' ſtiff with hoops and arm'd with ribs of whale;
Form a ſtrong line about the ſilver bound,
And guard the wide circumference around.

Whatever ſpirit, careleſs of his charge,
His poſt neglects, or leaves the fair at large,
Shall feel ſharp vengeance ſoon o'ertake his ſins,
Be ſtop'd in vials, or transfix'd with pins;
Or plung'd in lakes of bitter waſhes lie,
Or wedg'd whole ages in a bodkin's eye:
Gums and Pomatums ſhall his flight reſtrain,
While clog'd he beats his ſilken wings in vain;
Or Alum ſtyptics with contracting pow'r
Shrink his thin eſſence like a rivel'd flow'r:
Or, as Ixion fix'd, the wretch ſhall feel
The giddy motion of the whirling Mill,
In fumes of burning Chocolate ſhall glow,
And tremble at the ſea that froths below!

VER. 121. about the ſilver bound,] in alluſion to the ſhield of Achilles,

"And beat the Buckler's verge, and bound the whole.

He ſpoke; the ſpirits from the ſails deſcend;
Some, orb in orb, around the nymph extend;
Some thrid the mazy ringlets of her hair;
Some hang upon the pendents of her ear;
With beating hearts the dire event they wait,
Anxious, and trembling for the birth of Fate.

RAPE of the LOCK.

CANTO III.

CLOSE by thoſe meads, for ever crown'd with flow'rs,
Where Thames with pride ſurveys his riſing tow'rs,
There ſtands a ſtructure of majeſtic frame,
Which from the neighb'ring Hampton takes its name.
Here Britain's ſtateſmen oft the fall foredoom
Of foreign Tyrants, and of Nymphs at home;
Here thou, great ANNA! whom three realms obey,
Doſt ſometimes counſel take--and ſometimes Tea.
Hither the Heroes and the Nymphs reſort,
To taſte awhile the pleaſures of a Court;
In various talk th' inſtructive hours they paſt,
Who gave the ball, or paid the viſit laſt;

VARIATIONS.

VER. 1. Cloſe by thoſe meads,] The firſt Edition continues from this line to ver. 24. of this Canto. P.

VER. 11, 12. Originally in the firſt Edition,

" In various talk the chearful hours they paſt,
" Of, who was bit, or who capotted laſt." P.

One ſpeaks the glory of the Britiſh Queen,
And one deſcribes a charming Indian ſcreen;
A third interprets motions, looks, and eyes;
At ev'ry word a reputation dies.
Snuff, or the fan, ſupply each pauſe of chat,
With ſinging, laughing, ogling, and all that.

Mean while, declining from the noon of day,
The ſun obliquely ſhoots his burning ray;
The hungry Judges ſoon the ſentence ſign,
And wretches hang that Jury-men may dine;
The merchant from th'Exchange returns in peace,
And the long labours of the Toilet ceaſe.
Belinda now, whom thirſt of fame invites,
Burns to encounter two advent'rous Knights,
At Ombre ſingly to decide their doom;
And ſwells her breaſt with conqueſts yet to come.
Strait the three bands prepare in arms to join,
Each band the number of the ſacred nine.
Soon as ſhe ſpreads her hand, th' aërial guard
Deſcend, and ſit on each important card:

VARIATIONS.

VER. 24. And the long labours of the Toilet ceaſe.] All that follows of the game at Ombre, was added ſince the firſt Edition, till ver. 105. which connected thus,

"Sudden the board with cups and ſpoons is crown'd." P.

Firſt Ariel perch'd upon a Matadore,
Then each according to the rank they bore;
For Sylphs, yet mindful of their ancient race,
Are, as when women, wond'rous fond of place.
Behold, four Kings in majeſty rever'd,
With hoary whiſkers and a forky beard;
And four fair Queens whoſe hands ſuſtain a flow'r,
Th'expreſſive emblem of their ſofter pow'r;
Four Knaves in garbs ſuccinct, a truſty band;
Caps on their heads, and halberts in their hand;
And parti-colour'd troops, a ſhining train,
Draw forth to combat on the velvet plain.
The ſkilful Nymph reviews her force with care:
Let Spades be trumps! ſhe ſaid, and trumps they were.
Now move to war her ſable Matadores,
In ſhow like leaders of the ſwarthy Moors.
Spadillio firſt, unconquerable Lord!
Led off two captive trumps, and ſwept the board.
As many more Manillio forc'd to yield,
And march'd a victor from the verdant field.

NOTES.

VER. 47. Now move to war, etc.] The whole idea of this deſcription of a game at Ombre, is taken from Vida's deſcription of a game at Cheſs, in his poem intit. Scacchia Ludus.

Him Baſto follow'd, but his fate more hard
Gain'd but one trump and one Plebeian card.
With his broad ſabre next, a chief in years,
The hoary Majeſty of Spades appears,
Puts forth one manly leg, to ſight reveal'd,
The reſt, his many-colour'd robe conceal'd.
The rebel Knave, who dares his prince engage,
Proves the juſt victim of his royal rage.
Ev'n mighty Pam, that Kings and Queens o'er-threw,
And mow'd down armies in the fights of Lu,
Sad chance of war! now deſtitute of aid,
Falls undiſtinguiſh'd by the victor Spade!

Thus far both armies to Belinda yield;
Now to the Baron fate inclines the field.
His warlike Amazon her hoſt invades,
Th' imperial conſort of the crown of Spades.
The Club's black Tyrant firſt her victim dy'd,
Spite of his haughty mien, and barb'rous pride:
What boots the regal circle on his head,
His giant limbs, in ſtate unwieldy ſpread;
That long behind he trails his pompous robe,
And, of all monarchs, only graſps the globe?

The Baron now his Diamonds pours apace;
Th' embroider'd King who ſhews but half his face,

And his refulgent Queen, with pow'rs combin'd
Of broken troops an eaſy conqueſt find.
Clubs, Diamonds, Hearts, in wild diſorder ſeen,
With throngs promiſcuous ſtrow the level green.
Thus when diſpers'd a routed army runs,
Of Aſia's troops, and Afric's ſable ſons,
With like confuſion different nations fly,
Of various habit, and of various dye;
The pierc'd battalions diſunited fall,
In heaps on heaps; one fate o'erwhelms them all.
The Knave of Diamonds tries his wily arts,
And wins (oh ſhameful chance!) the Queen of Hearts.
At this, the blood the virgin's cheek forſook,
A livid paleneſs ſpreads o'er all her look;
She ſees, and trembles at th' approaching ill,
Juſt in the jaws of ruin, and Codille.
And now (as oft in ſome diſtemper'd State)
On one nice Trick depends the gen'ral fate:
An Ace of Hearts ſteps forth: The King unſeen
Lurk'd in her hand, and mourn'd his captive Queen:
He ſprings to vengeance with an eager pace,
And falls like thunder on the proſtrate Ace.

The nymph exulting fills with ſhouts the ſky;
The walls, the woods, and long canals reply.
Oh thoughtleſs mortals! ever blind to fate,
Too ſoon dejected, and too ſoon elate.
Sudden, theſe honours ſhall be ſnatch'd away,
And curs'd for ever this victorious day.
For lo! the board with cups and ſpoons is crown'd,
The berries crackle, and the mill turns round;
On ſhining altars of Japan they raiſe
The ſilver lamp; the fiery ſpirits blaze:
From ſilver ſpouts the grateful liquors glide,
While China's earth receives the ſmoaking tide:
At once they gratify their ſcent and taſte,
And frequent cups prolong the rich repaſt.
Strait hover round the Fair her airy band;
Some, as ſhe ſipp'd, the fuming liquor fann'd,

Some o'er her lap their careful plumes diſplay'd,
Trembling, and conſcious of the rich brocade.
Coffee (which makes the politican wiſe,
And ſee thro' all things with his half-ſhut eyes)
Sent up in vapours to the Baron's brain
New ſtratagems, the radiant Lock to gain.
Ah ceaſe, raſh youth! deſiſt ere 'tis too late,
Fear the juſt Gods, and think of Scylla's Fate!
Chang'd to a bird, and ſent to flit in air,
She dearly pays for Niſus' injur'd hair!

But when to Miſchief mortals bend their will,
How ſoon they find fit inſtruments of ill?
Juſt then, Clariſſa drew with tempting grace
A two-edg'd weapon from her ſhining caſe:
So Ladies in Romance aſſiſt their Knight,
Preſent the ſpear, and arm him for the fight.
He takes the gift with rev'rence, and extends
The little engine on his fingers' ends;
This juſt behind Belinda's neck he ſpread,
As o'er the fragrant ſteams ſhe bends her head.
Swift to the Lock a thouſand Sprites repair,
A thouſand wings, by turns, blow back the hair;

NOTES.

VER. 122. and think of Scylla's Fate!] Vide Ovid's Metam. viii. P.

And thrice they twitch'd the diamond in her ear;
Thrice ſhe look'd back, and thrice the foe drew near.
Juſt in that inſtant, anxious Ariel ſought
The cloſe receſſes of the Virgin's thought:
As on the noſegay in her breaſt reclin'd,
He watch'd th' ideas riſing in her mind,
Sudden he view'd, in ſpite of all her art,
An earthly Lover lurking at her heart.
Amaz'd, confus'd, he found his pow'r expir'd,
Reſign'd to fate, and with a ſigh retir'd.

The Peer now ſpreads the glitt'ring Forfex wide,
T' incloſe the Lock; now joins it, to divide.
Ev'n then, before the fatal engine clos'd,
A wretched Sylph too fondly interpos'd;
Fate urg'd the ſheers, and cut the Sylph in twain,
(But airy ſubſtance ſoon unites again)

VARIATIONS.

VER. 147.

" T' incloſe the Lock; then joins it to divide:

All that is between was added afterwards. P.

NOTES.

VER. 152. But airy ſubſtance] See Milton, lib. vi. of Satan cut aſunder by the Angel Michael. P.

The meeting points the ſacred hair diſſever
From the fair head, for ever, and for ever!
Then flaſh'd the living light'ning from her eyes,
And ſcreams of horror rend th' affrighted ſkies.
Not louder ſhrieks to pitying heav'n are caſt,
When huſbands, or when lap-dogs breathe their laſt;
Or when rich China veſſels fall'n from high,
In glitt'ring duſt, and painted fragments lie!
Let wreaths of triumph now my temples twine,
(The Victor cry'd) the glorious prize is mine!
While fiſh in ſtreams, or birds delight in air,
Or in a coach and ſix the Britiſh Fair,
As long as Atalantis ſhall be read,
Or the ſmall pillow grace a Lady's bed,
While viſits ſhall be paid on ſolemn days,
When num'rous wax-lights in bright order blaze,
While nymphs take treats, or aſſignations give,
So long my honour, name, and praiſe ſhall live!

NOTES.

VER. 165. Atalantis] A famous book written about that time by a woman; full of Court and Party-ſcandal; and in a looſe effeminacy of ſtyle and ſentiment, which well ſuited the debauched taſte of the better vulgar.

BUT anxious cares the penſive nymph oppreſs'd,
And ſecret paſſions labour'd in her breaſt.
Not youthful kings in battle ſeiz'd alive,
Not ſcornful virgins who their charms ſurvive,
Not ardent lovers robb'd of all their bliſs,
Not ancient ladies when refus'd a kiſs,
Not tyrants fierce that unrepenting die,

VER. 1. At regina gravi, etc. Virg. Æn. iv. P.

For, that ſad moment, when the Sylphs withdrew,
And Ariel weeping from Belinda flew,
Umbriel, a duſky, melancholy ſprite,
As ever ſully'd the fair face of light,
Down to the central earth, his proper ſcene,
Repair'd to ſearch the gloomy Cave of Spleen.
Swift on his ſooty pinions flits the Gnome,
And in a vapour reach'd the diſmal dome.
No cheerful breeze this ſullen region knows,
The dreaded Eaſt is all the wind that blows.
Here in a grotto, ſhelter'd cloſe from air,
And ſcreen'd in ſhades from day's deteſted glare,
She ſighs for ever on her penſive bed,
Pain at her ſide, and Megrim at her head.
Two handmaids wait the throne: alike in place,
But diff'ring far in figure and in face.
Here ſtood Ill-nature like an ancient maid,
Her wrinkled form in black and white array'd!
With ſtore of pray'rs, for mornings, nights, and noons,
Her hand is fill'd; her boſom with lampoons.
There Affectation with a ſickly mien,
Shows in her cheek the roſes of eighteen,
Practis'd to liſp, and hang the head aſide,
Faints into airs, and languiſhes with pride,

On the rich quilt ſinks with becoming woe,
Wrapt in a gown, for ſickneſs, and for ſhow.
The fair-ones feel ſuch maladies as theſe,
When each new night-dreſs gives a new diſeaſe.

A conſtant Vapour o'er the palace flies;
Strange phantoms riſing as the miſts ariſe;
Dreadful, as hermits dreams in haunted ſhades,
Or bright, as viſions of expiring maids.
Now glaring fiends, and ſnakes on rolling ſpires,
Pale ſpectres, gaping tombs, and purple fires:
Now lakes of liquid gold, Elyſian ſcenes,
And cryſtal domes, and Angels in machines.

Unnumber'd throngs, on ev'ry ſide are ſeen,
Of bodies chang'd to various forms by Spleen.
Here living Tea-pots ſtand, one arm held out,
One bent; the handle this, and that the ſpout:
A Pipkin there, like Homer's Tripod walks;
Here ſighs a Jar, and there a Gooſe-pye talks;

Men prove with child, as pow'rful fancy works,
And maids turn'd bottles, call aloud for corks.
Safe paſt the Gnome thro' this fantaſtic band,
A branch of healing Spleenwort in his hand.
Then thus addreſs'd the pow'r---Hail, wayward Queen!
Who rule the ſex to fifty from fifteen:
Parent of vapours and of female wit,
Who give th' hyſteric, or poetic fit,
On various tempers act by various ways,
Make ſome take phyſic, others ſcribble plays;
Who cauſe the proud their viſits to delay,
And ſend the godly in a pet to pray.
A nymph there is, that all thy pow'r diſdains,
And thouſand more in equal mirth maintains.
But oh! if e'er thy Gnome could ſpoil a grace,
Or raiſe a pimple on a beauteous face,
Like Citron-waters matrons cheeks inflame,
Or change complexions at a loſing game;
If e'er with airy horns I planted heads,
Or rumpled petticoats, or tumbled beds,

tations of the mortified Recluſes in the Church of Rome, and the extatic viſions of their female Saints, were as much the effects of hypochondriac diſorders, the Spleen, or, what was then the faſhionable word, the Vapours, as any of the imaginary transformations he ſpeaks of afterwards.

Or caus'd ſuſpicion when no ſoul was rude,
Or diſcompos'd the head-dreſs of a Prude,
Or e'er to coſtive lap-dog gave diſeaſe,
Which not the tears of brighteſt eyes could eaſe:
Hear me, and touch Belinda with chagrin,
That ſingle act gives half the world the ſpleen.

The Goddeſs with a diſcontented air
Seems to reject him, tho' ſhe grants his pray'r.
A wond'rous Bag with both her hands ſhe binds,
Like that where once Ulyſſes held the winds;
There ſhe collects the force of female lungs,
Sighs, ſobs, and paſſions, and the war of tongues.
A Vial next ſhe fills with fainting fears,
Soft ſorrows, melting griefs, and flowing tears.
The Gnome rejoicing bears her gifts away,
Spreads his black wings, and ſlowly mounts to day.

Sunk in Thaleſtris' arms the nymph he found,
Her eyes dejected, and her hair unbound.
Full o'er their heads the ſwelling bag he rent,
And all the Furies iſſu'd at the vent.
Belinda burns with more than mortal ire,
And fierce Thaleſtris fans the riſing fire.
O wretched maid! ſhe ſpread her hands, and cry'd,
(While Hampton's echoes, Wretched maid! reply'd)

Was it for this you took ſuch conſtant care
The bodkin, comb, and eſſence to prepare?
For this your Locks in paper durance bound,
For this with tort'ring irons wreath'd around?
For this with fillets ſtrain'd your tender head?
And bravely bore the double loads of lead?
Gods! ſhall the raviſher diſplay your hair,
While the Fops envy, and the Ladies ſtare!
Honour forbid! at whoſe unrival'd ſhrine
Eaſe, pleaſure, virtue, all our ſex reſign.
Methinks already I your tears ſurvey,
Already hear the horrid things they ſay,
Already ſee you a degraded toaſt,
And all your honour in a whiſper loſt!
How ſhall I, then, your helpleſs fame defend?
'Twill then be infamy to ſeem your friend!
And ſhall this prize, th' ineſtimable prize,
Expos'd thro' cryſtal to the gazing eyes,
And heighten'd by the diamond's circling rays,
On that rapacious hand for ever blaze?
Sooner ſhall graſs in Hyde-park Circus grow,
And wits take lodgings in the ſound of Bow;
Sooner let earth, air, ſea, to Chaos fall,
Men, monkeys, lap-dogs, parrots, periſh all!

She ſaid; then raging to Sir Plume repairs,
And bids her Beau demand the precious hairs:
(Sir Plume of amber ſnuff-box juſtly vain,
And the nice conduct of a clouded cane)
With earneſt eyes, and round unthinking face,
He firſt the ſnuff-box open'd, then the caſe,
And thus broke out---"My Lord, why, what
" the devil!
" Z--ds! damn the Lock! 'fore Gad, you muſt
" be civil!
" Plague on't! 'tis paſt a Jeſt--nay prithee, pox!
" Give her the hair"--he ſpoke, and rapp'd his box.
It grieves me much (reply'd the Peer again)
Who ſpeaks ſo well ſhould ever ſpeak in vain.
But by this Lock, this ſacred Lock I ſwear,
(Which never more ſhall join its parted hair;
Which never more its honours ſhall renew,
Clip'd from the lovely head where late it grew)

That while my noſtrils draw the vital air,
This hand, which won it, ſhall for ever wear.
He ſpoke, and ſpeaking, in proud triumph ſpread
The long-contended honours of her head.
But Umbriel, hateful Gnome! forbears not ſo;
He breaks the Vial whence the ſorrows flow.
Then ſee! the nymph in beauteous grief appears,
Her eyes half-languiſhing, half-drown'd in tears;
On her heav'd boſom hung her drooping head,
Which, with a ſigh, ſhe rais'd; and thus ſhe ſaid.
For ever curs'd be this deteſted day,
Which ſnatch'd my beſt, my fav'rite curl away!
Happy! ah ten times happy had I been,
If Hampton-Court theſe eyes had never ſeen!
Yet am not I the firſt miſtaken maid,
By love of Courts to num'rous ills betray'd.
Oh had I rather un-admir'd, remain'd
In ſome lone iſle, or diſtant Northern land;
Where the gilt Chariot never marks the way,
Where none learn Ombre, none e'er taſte Bohea!

NOTES.

VER. 141. But Umbriel, hateful Gnome! forbears not ſo;
He breaks the Vial whence the ſorrows flow.]

Theſe two lines are additional; and aſſign the cauſe of the different operation on the Paſſions of the two Ladies. The poem went on before without that diſtinction, as without any Machinery, to the end of the Canto. P.

There kept my charms conceal'd from mortal eye,
Like roſes, that in deſerts bloom and die.
What mov'd my mind with youthful Lords to roam?
O had I ſtay'd, and ſaid my pray'rs at home!
'Twas this, the morning omens ſeem'd to tell,
Thrice from my trembling hand the patch-box fell;
The tott'ring China ſhook without a wind,
Nay Poll ſat mute, and Shock was moſt unkind!
A Sylph too warn'd me of the threats of fate,
In myſtic viſions, now believ'd too late!
See the poor remnants of theſe ſlighted hairs!
My hands ſhall rend what ev'n thy rapine ſpares:
Theſe in two ſable ringlets taught to break,
Once gave new beauties to the ſnowy neck;
The ſiſter-lock now ſits uncouth, alone,
And in its fellow's fate foreſees its own;
Uncurl'd it hangs, the fatal ſheers demands,
And tempts, once more, thy ſacrilegious hands.
Oh hadſt thou, cruel! been content to ſeize
Hairs leſs in ſight, or any hairs but theſe!

RAPE of the LOCK.

CANTO V.

SHE ſaid: the pitying audience melt in tears,
But Fate and Jove had ſtopp'd the Baron's ears.
In vain Thaleſtris with reproach aſſails,
For who can move when fair Belinda fails?
Not half ſo fix'd the Trojan could remain,
While Anna begg'd and Dido rag'd in vain.
Then grave Clariſſa graceful wav'd her fan;
Silence enſu'd, and thus the Nymph began.
Say, why are Beauties prais'd and honour'd moſt,
The wiſe man's paſſion, and the vain man's toaſt?

VARIATIONS.

VER. 7. Then grave Clariſſa, etc.] A new Character introduced in the ſubſequent Editions, to open more clearly the MORAL of the Poem, in a parody of the ſpeech of Sarpedon to Glaucus in Homer. P.

IMITATIONS.

VER. 9. Say, why are Beauties, etc.] Homer.

" Why boaſt we, Glaucus! our extended reign,
" Where Xanthus' ſtreams enrich the Lycian plain;
" Our num'rous herds that range the fruitful field,
" And hills where vines their purple harveſt yield;

Why deck'd with all that land and ſea afford,
Why Angels call'd, and Angel-like ador'd?
Why round our coaches croud the white-glov'd Beaux,
Why bows the ſide-box from its inmoſt rows?
How vain are all theſe glories, all our pains,
Unleſs good ſenſe preſerve what beauty gains:
That men may ſay, when we the front-box grace,
Behold the firſt in virtue as in face!

IMITATIONS.

" Our foaming bowls with purer nectar crown'd,
" Our feaſts enhanc'd with muſic's ſprightly ſound;
" Why on thoſe ſhores are we with joy ſurvey'd,
" Admir'd as heroes, and as Gods obey'd;
" Unleſs great acts ſuperior merit prove,
" And vindicate the bounteous pow'rs above?
" 'Tis ours, the dignity they give, to grace;
" The firſt in valour, as the firſt in place:
" That when with wond'ring eyes our martial bands
" Behold our deeds tranſcending our commands,
" Such, they may cry, deſerve the ſov'reign ſtate,
" Whom thoſe that envy, dare not imitate.
" Could all our care elude the gloomy grave,
" Which claims no leſs the fearful than the brave,
" For luſt of fame I ſhould not vainly dare
" In fighting fields, nor urge thy ſoul to war.
" But ſince, alas! ignoble age muſt come,
" Diſeaſe, and death's inexorable doom;
" The life which others pay, let us beſtow,
" And give to fame what we to nature owe;
" Brave tho' we fall, and honour'd if we live,
" Or let us glory gain, or glory give."

Oh! if to dance all night, and dreſs all day,
Charm'd the ſmall-pox, or chas'd old-age away;
Who would not ſcorn what houſewife's cares produce,
Or who would learn one earthly thing of uſe?
To patch, nay ogle, might become a Saint,
Nor could it ſure be ſuch a ſin to paint.
But ſince, alas! frail beauty muſt decay,
Curl'd or uncurl'd, ſince Locks will turn to grey;
Since painted, or not painted, all ſhall fade,
And ſhe who ſcorns a man, muſt die a maid;
What then remains but well our pow'r to uſe,
And keep good-humour ſtill whate'er we loſe?
And truſt me, dear! good-humour can prevail,
When airs, and flights, and ſcreams, and ſcolding fail.
Beauties in vain their pretty eyes may roll;
Charms ſtrike the ſight, but merit wins the ſoul.
So ſpoke the Dame, but no applauſe enſu'd;
Belinda frown'd, Thaleſtris call'd her Prude.

IMITATIONS.

VER. 35. So ſpoke the Dame,] It is a verſe frequently repeated in Homer after any ſpeech,

"So ſpoke—and all the Heroes applauded." P.

To arms, to arms! the fierce Virago cries,
And ſwift as lightning to the combat flies.
All ſide in parties, and begin th' attack;
Fans clap, ſilks ruſsle, and tough whalebones crack;
Heroes' and Heroines' ſhouts confus'dly riſe,
And baſe and treble voices ſtrike the ſkies.
No common weapons in their hands are found,
Like Gods they fight, nor dread a mortal wound.
So when bold Homer makes the Gods engage,
And heav'nly breaſts with human paſſions rage;
'Gainſt Pallas, Mars; Latona, Hermes arms;
And all Olympus rings with loud alarms:
Jove's thunder roars, heav'n trembles all around,
Blue Neptune ſtorms, the bellowing deeps reſound:
Earth ſhakes her nodding tow'rs, the ground gives way,
And the pale ghoſts ſtart at the flaſh of day!

VARIATIONS.

VER. 37. To arms, to arms!] From hence the firſt Edition goes on to the concluſion, except a very few ſhort inſertions added, to keep the Machinery in view to the end of the poem. P.

NOTES.

VER. 45. So when bold Homer] Homer, Il. xx. P.

Triumphant Umbriel on a ſconce's height
Clap'd his glad wings, and ſate to view the fight:
Prop'd on their bodkin ſpears, the Sprites ſurvey
The growing combat, or aſſiſt the fray.
While thro' the preſs enrag'd Thaleſtris flies,
And ſcatters death around from both her eyes,
A Beau and Witling periſh'd in the throng,
One dy'd in metaphor, and one in ſong.
"O cruel nymph! a living death I bear,"
Cry'd Dapperwit, and ſunk beſide his chair.
A mournful glance Sir Fopling upwards caſt,
"Thoſe eyes are made ſo killing"—was his laſt.
Thus on Mæander's flow'ry margin lies
Th' expiring Swan, and as he ſings he dies.
When bold Sir Plume had drawn Clariſſa down,
Chloe ſtepp'd in, and kill'd him with a frown;
She ſmil'd to ſee the doughty hero ſlain,
But, at her ſmile, the Beau reviv'd again.

VARIATIONS.

VER. 53. Triumphant Umbriel] Theſe four lines added, for the reaſon before-mentioned. P.

IMITATIONS.

VER. 53. Triumphant Umbriel] Minerva in like manner, during the battle of Ulyſſes with the Suitors in the Odyſſ. perches on a beam of the roof to behold it. P.

VER. 64. Thoſe eyes are made ſo killing] The words of a Song in the Opera of Camilla. P.

VER. 65. Thus on Mæander's flow'ry margin lies]

Sic ubi fata vocant, udis abjectus in herbis,
Ad vada Mæandri concinit albus olor.
Ov. Ep. P.

Now Jove ſuſpends his golden ſcales in air,
Weighs the Men's wits againſt the Lady's hair;
The doubtful beam long nods from ſide to ſide;
At length the wits mount up, the hairs ſubſide.
See fierce Belinda on the Baron flies,
With more than uſual lightning in her eyes:
Nor fear'd the Chief th' unequal fight to try,
Who ſought no more than on his foe to die.
But this bold Lord with manly ſtrength endu'd,
She with one finger and a thumb ſubdu'd:
Juſt where the breath of life his noſtrils drew,
A charge of ſnuff the wily virgin threw;
The Gnomes direct, to ev'ry atom juſt,
The pungent grains of titillating duſt.
Sudden, with ſtarting tears each eye o'erflows,
And the high dome re-echoes to his noſe.
Now meet thy fate, incens'd Belinda cry'd,
And drew a deadly bodkin from her ſide.
(The ſame, his ancient perſonage to deck,
Her great great grandſire wore about his neck,

VARIATIONS.

VER. 83. The Gnomes direct,] Theſe two lines added for the above reaſon. P.

NOTES.

VER. 71. Now Jove, etc.] Vid. Homer, Il. viii. and Virg. Æn. xii. P.

IMITATIONS.

VER. 89. The ſame, his ancient perſonage to deck,] In imitation of the progreſs of Agamemnon's ſceptre in Homer, Il. ii. P.

In three ſeal-rings; which after, melted down,
Form'd a vaſt buckle for his widow's gown:
Her infant grandame's whiſtle next it grew,
The bells ſhe jingled, and the whiſtle blew;
Then in a bodkin grac'd her mother's hairs,
Which long ſhe wore, and now Belinda wears.)

Boaſt not my fall (he cry'd) inſulting foe!
Thou by ſome other ſhalt be laid as low.
Nor think, to die dejects my lofty mind;
All that I dread is leaving you behind!
Rather than ſo, ah let me ſtill ſurvive,
And burn in Cupid's flames---but burn alive.

Reſtore the Lock! ſhe cries; and all around
Reſtore the Lock! the vaulted roofs rebound.
Not fierce Othello in ſo loud a ſtrain
Roar'd for the handkerchief that caus'd his pain.
But ſee how oft ambitious aims are croſs'd,
And chiefs contend till all the prize is loſt!
The Lock, obtain'd with guilt, and kept with pain,
In ev'ry place is ſought, but ſought in vain:
With ſuch a prize no mortal muſt be bleſt,
So heav'n decrees! with heav'n who can conteſt?

Some thought it mounted to the Lunar ſphere,
Since all things loſt on earth are treaſur'd there.
There Heros' wits are kept in pond'rous vaſes,
And Beaux in ſnuff-boxes and tweezer-caſes.
There broken vows, and death-bed alms are found,
And lovers hearts with ends of ribband bound,
The courtier's promiſes, and ſick men's pray'rs,
The ſmiles of harlots, and the tears of heirs,
Cages for gnats, and chains to yoak a flea,
Dry'd butterflies, and tomes of caſuiſtry.

But truſt the Muſe---ſhe ſaw it upward riſe,
Tho' mark'd by none but quick, poetic eyes:
(So Rome's great founder to the heav'ns withdrew,
To Proculus alone confeſs'd in view)
A ſudden Star, it ſhot thro' liquid air,
And drew behind a radiant trail of hair.
Not Berenice's Locks firſt roſe ſo bright,
The heav'ns beſpangling with diſhevel'd light.

VER. 128. Flammiferumque trahens ſpatioſo limite crinem
Stella micat. Ovid. P.

The Sylphs behold it kindling as it flies,
And pleas'd purſue its progreſs thro' the ſkies.
This the Beau monde ſhall from the Mall ſurvey,
And hail with muſic its propitious ray;
This the bleſt Lover ſhall for Venus take,
And ſend up vows from Roſamonda's lake;
This Partridge ſoon ſhall view in cloudleſs ſkies,
When next he looks thro' Galilæo's eyes;
And hence th' egregious wizard ſhall foredoom
The fate of Louis, and the fall of Rome.
Then ceaſe, bright Nymph! to mourn thy raviſh'd hair,
Which adds new glory to the ſhining ſphere!
Not all the treſſes that fair head can boaſt,
Shall draw ſuch envy as the Lock you loſt.
For after all the murders of your eye,
When, after millions ſlain, yourſelf ſhall die;

VARIATIONS.

VER. 131. The Sylphs behold] Theſe two lines added for the ſame reaſon, to keep in view the Machinery of the Poem. P.

NOTES.

VER. 137. This Partridge ſoon] John Partridge was a ridiculous Star-gazer, who in his Almanacks every year never fail'd to predict the downfal of the Pope, and the King of France, then at war with the Engliſh. P.

When thoſe fair ſuns ſhall ſet, as ſet they muſt,
And all thoſe treſſes ſhall be laid in duſt,
This Lock, the Muſe ſhall conſecrate to fame,
And 'midſt the ſtars inſcribe Belinda's name.

ELEGY

To the MEMORY of an UNFORTUNATE LADY*.

WHAT beck'ning ghoſt, along the moon-light ſhade
Invites my ſteps, and points to yonder glade?
'Tis ſhe!---but why that bleeding boſom gor'd?
Why dimly gleams the viſionary ſword?
Oh ever beauteous, ever friendly! tell,
Is it, in heav'n, a crime to love too well?
To bear too tender, or too firm a heart,
To act a Lover's or a Roman's part?
Is there no bright reverſion in the ſky,
For thoſe who greatly think, or bravely die?
Why bade ye elſe, ye Pow'rs! her ſoul aſpire
Above the vulgar flight of low deſire?

NOTES.

* See the Duke of Buckingham's verſes to a Lady deſigning to retire into a Monaſtery, compared with Mr. Pope's Letters to ſeveral Ladies, p. 206. quarto Edition. She ſeems to be the ſame perſon whoſe unfortunate death is the ſubject of this poem. P.

Ambition firſt ſprung from your bleſt abodes;
The glorious fault of Angels and of Gods:
Thence to their images on earth it flows,
And in the breaſts of Kings and Heroes glows.
Moſt ſouls, 'tis true, but peep out once an age,
Dull ſullen pris'ners in the body's cage:
Dim lights of life, that burn a length of years
Uſeleſs, unſeen, as lamps in ſepulchres;
Like Eaſtern Kings a lazy ſtate they keep,
And, cloſe confin'd to their own palace, ſleep.

From theſe perhaps (ere nature bade her die)
Fate ſnatch'd her early to the pitying ſky.
As into air the purer ſpirits flow,
And ſep'rate from their kindred dregs below;
So flew the ſoul to its congenial place,
Nor left one virtue to redeem her Race.

But thou, falſe guardian of a charge too good,
Thou, mean deſerter of thy brother's blood!
See on theſe ruby lips the trembling breath,
Theſe cheeks now fading at the blaſt of death;
Cold is that breaſt which warm'd the world before,
And thoſe love-darting eyes muſt roll no more.
Thus, if eternal juſtice rules the ball,
Thus ſhall your wives, and thus your children fall;
On all the line a ſudden vengeance waits,
And frequent herſes ſhall beſiege your gates;

There paſſengers ſhall ſtand, and pointing ſay,
(While the long fun'rals blacken all the way)
Lo! theſe were they, whoſe ſouls the Furies ſteel'd,
And curs'd with hearts unknowing how to yield.
Thus unlamented paſs the proud away,
The gaze of fools, and pageant of a day!
So periſh all, whoſe breaſt ne'er learn'd to glow
For others good, or melt at others woe.

What can atone (oh ever-injur'd ſhade!)
Thy fate unpity'd, and thy rites unpaid?
No friend's complaint, no kind domeſtic tear
Pleas'd thy pale ghoſt, or grac'd thy mournful bier.
By foreign hands thy dying eyes were clos'd,
By foreign hands thy decent limbs compos'd,
By foreign hands thy humble grave adorn'd,
By ſtrangers honour'd, and by ſtrangers mourn'd!
What tho' no friends in ſable weeds appear,
Grieve for an hour, perhaps, then mourn a year,
And bear about the mockery of woe
To midnight dances, and the public ſhow?
What tho' no weeping Loves thy aſhes grace,
Nor poliſh'd marble emulate thy face?
What tho' no ſacred earth allow thee room,
Nor hallow'd dirge be mutter'd o'er thy tomb?
Yet ſhall thy grave with riſing flow'rs be dreſt,
And the green turf lie lightly on thy breaſt:

There ſhall the morn her earlieſt tears beſtow,
There the firſt roſes of the year ſhall blow;
While Angels with their ſilver wings o'erſhade
The ground, now ſacred by thy reliques made.

So peaceful reſts, without a ſtone, a name,
What once had beauty, titles, wealth, and fame.
How low'd, how honour'd once, avails thee not,
To whom related, or by whom begot;
A heap of duſt alone remains of thee,
'Tis all thou art, and all the proud ſhall be!

Poets themſelves muſt fall like thoſe they ſung,
Deaf the prais'd ear, and mute the tuneful tongue.
Ev'n he, whoſe ſoul now melts in mournful lays,
Shall ſhortly want the gen'rous tear he pays;
Then from his cloſing eyes thy form ſhall part,
And the laſt pang ſhall tear thee from his heart,
Life's idle buſineſs at one gaſp be o'er,
The Muſe forgot, and thou belov'd no more!

PROLOGUE†

TO

Mr. ADDISON's Tragedy

CATO.

TO wake the ſoul by tender ſtrokes of art,
To raiſe the genius, and to mend the heart;
To make mankind, in conſcious virtue bold,
Live o'er each ſcene, and be what they behold:
For this the Tragic Muſe firſt trod the ſtage,
Commanding tears to ſtream thro' ev'ry age;
Tyrants no more their ſavage nature kept,
And foes to virtue wonder'd how they wept.
Our author ſhuns by vulgar ſprings to move
The hero's glory, or the virgin's love;
In pitying love, we but our weakneſs ſhow,
And wild Ambition well deſerves its woe.

† This Prologue, and the Epilogue which follows, are the moſt perfect models of this ſpecies of writing, both in the ſerious and the ludicrous way.

Here tears ſhall flow from a more gen'rous cauſe,
Such tears as Patriots ſhed for dying Laws:
He bids your breaſts with ancient ardour riſe,
And calls forth Roman drops from Britiſh eyes.
Virtue confeſs'd in human ſhape he draws,
What Plato thought, and godlike Cato was:
No common object to your ſight diſplays,
But what with pleaſure Heav'n itſelf ſurveys,
A brave man ſtruggling in the ſtorms of fate,
And greatly falling with a falling ſtate.
While Cato gives his little Senate laws,
What boſom beats not in his Country's cauſe?
Who ſees him act, but envies ev'ry deed?
Who hears him groan, and does not wiſh to bleed?
Ev'n when proud Cæſar 'midſt triumphal cars,
The ſpoils of nations, and the pomp of wars,
Ignobly vain, and impotently great,
Show'd Rome her Cato's figure drawn in ſtate;
As her dead Father's rev'rend image paſt,
The pomp was darken'd, and the day o'ercaſt;
The Triumph ceas'd, tears guſh'd from ev'ry eye;
The world's great Victor paſs'd unheeded by;
Her laſt good man dejected Rome ador'd,
And honour'd Cæſar's leſs than Cato's ſword.

NOTES.

VER. 20. But what with pleaſure] This alludes to a famous paſſage of Seneca, which Mr. Addiſon afterwards uſed as a motto to his play, when it was printed.

Britons, attend: be worth like this approv'd,
And ſhow, you have the virtue to be mov'd.
With honeſt ſcorn the firſt fam'd Cato view'd
Rome learning arts from Greece, whom ſhe ſubdu'd;
Your ſcene precariouſly ſubſiſts too long
On French tranſlation, and Italian ſong.
Dare to have ſenſe yourſelves; aſſert the ſtage,
Be juſtly warm'd with your own native rage:
Such Plays alone ſhould win a Britiſh ear,
As Cato's ſelf had not diſdain'd to hear.

NOTES.

VER. 46. As Cato's ſelf, etc.] This alludes to that famous ſtory of his coming into the Theatre, and going out again.

EPILOGUE

TO

Mr. ROWE's JANE SHORE.

Deſigned for Mrs. OLDFIELD.

PRodigious this! the Frail-one of our Play
From her own Sex ſhould mercy find to-day!
You might have held the pretty head aſide,
Peep'd in your fans, been ſerious, thus, and cry'd,
The Play may paſs----but that ſtrange creature, Shore,
I can't---indeed now---I ſo hate a whore---
Juſt as a blockhead rubs his thoughtleſs ſkull,
And thanks his ſtars he was not born a fool;
So from a ſiſter ſinner you ſhall hear,
"How ſtrangely you expoſe yourſelf, my dear?"
But let me die, all raillery apart,
Our ſex are ſtill forgiving at their heart;
And, did not wicked cuſtom ſo contrive,
We'd be the beſt, good-natur'd things alive.

There are, 'tis true, who talk another tale,
That virtuous ladies envy while they rail;
Such rage without betrays the fire within;
In ſome cloſe corner of the ſoul, they ſin;
Still hoarding up, moſt ſcandalouſly nice,
Amidſt their virtues a reſerve of vice.
The godly dame, who fleſhly failings damns,
Scolds with her maid, or with her chaplain crams.
Would you enjoy ſoft nights and ſolid dinners?
Faith, gallants, board with ſaints, and bed with ſinners.

Well, if our Author in the Wife offends,
He has a Huſband that will make amends:
He draws him gentle, tender, and forgiving,
And ſure ſuch kind good creatures may be living.
In days of old, they pardon'd breach of vows,
Stern Cato's ſelf was no relentleſs ſpouſe:
Plu---Plutarch, what's his name, that writes his life?
Tells us, that Cato dearly lov'd his Wife:
Yet if a friend, a night or ſo, ſhould need her,
He'd recommend her as a ſpecial breeder.
To lend a wife, few here would ſcruple make,
But, pray, which of you all would take her back?
Tho' with the Stoic Chief our ſtage may ring,
The Stoic Huſband was the glorious thing.

The man had courage, was a ſage, 'tis true,
And lov'd his country,---but what's that to you?
Thoſe ſtrange examples ne'er were made to fit ye,
But the kind cuckold might inſtruct the City:
There, many an honeſt man may copy Cato,
Who ne'er ſaw naked ſword, or look'd in Plato.
If, after all, you think it a diſgrace,
That Edward's Miſs thus perks it in your face;
To ſee a piece of failing fleſh and blood,
In all the reſt ſo impudently good;
Faith, let the modeſt Matrons of the town
Come here in crouds, and ſtare the ſtrumpet down.
